HULL LASHES AXIS, WARNS U. S. IN PERIL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (AP)—Summoning the nation to "invoke the law of self-defense before it is too late," Secretary of State Hull urged upon Congress today the enactment of legislation for unlimited supplies of war materials to Britain and other nations battling a "world movement of conquest."

Hull testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in support of President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill. He was the first witness on this historic legislation and he expressed the belief it was "absolutely necessary" to the nation's defense.

In a statement of about 3500 words he also said that if the Atlantic ocean fell "into German control" it would "offer little or no assurance of security."

"Were Britain defeated and were she to lose command of the seas," he said, "Germany could easily cross the Atlantic, especially the south Atlantic, unless we were ready and able to do what Britain is doing now."

Hull also took occasion to voice some of the strongest condemnation of the expansionist policies of Japan in the Far East which has been uttered by the Administration.

INTENTIONS CLEAR

Among other things, he said, Japan's new order would lead, economically, to "improverishment" of invaded parts of the Orient and, socially, to "destruction of personal liberties and the reduction of the conquerered peoples to the role of inferiors."

Pointedly he asserted that Germany, Japan and Italy had made unmistakably clear their intentions to "repudiate and destroy the very foundations of a civilized world order under law" and to conquer and establish "tyrannical rules over their victims."

When Hull finished the statement, committee members turned to questioning him and Rep. Luther A. Johnson (D.) of Texas asked whether a section of the President's lease-lend bill providing for repair of belligerent vessels, such as those of Britain, in United States ports, violated international law.

"Nothing but a realistic view of current developments can be regarded as a sane view," the white-haired Hull replied gravely. "The question is whether in the face of a universally recognized movement or force to in-

French Food Ship Again Heads Out

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Jan. 15 (AP)—The French merchant ship Mendoza, loaded with food for blockaded France, was reported from Punta Del Este to have sailed eastward shortly after noon today, apparently in a fourth attempt to get past a British warship to the open sea.

Hub's 211th Blasts 'Foe Air Raid' In Camp Hulen Gunnery Trials

By AUSTEN LAKE

This is the third of a series of articles by Austen Lake, American staff correspondent visiting the 211th Coast Artillery (First Corps Cadets) in training at Camp Hulen, Texas.

CAMP HULEN, Texas, Jan. 15—In actual warfare against an actual enemy, the spot-lighting of a plane would have been only the first preliminary phase in bagging a bomber.

In effect the detector and searchlight crews would have said to their battery mates at the 3-inch guns, "He's yours now" and immediately the long, steel tubes, spraddled out on their jacks and stationed geometrically at the corners of a large square, would be pumping shrapnel into that pool of light—shots that progress swiftly, 25 to the minute in successive rows of puffball dots that were 100 feet in diameter.

In real warfare the sky would be filled with soft, celestial explosions which, from the ground sound like "cah-rump . . . rump" and look like sharp firefly blinks. And then, presently perhaps, the shining gnat would flutter down as bits of jagged steel tore its wings—in theory at least. But this was merely training make-believe, and no guns barked.

The two-hour ground lesson was over for Battery D and the crews blacked out their circular eyes, restoring the night to its original black and letting their quarry drone away. The bright moth was invisible once more and humming off at other angles for other light and detector crews among the marshy bayous of Matagorda County to spot and spring their incandescent traps.

Here and there other anti-aircraft beacons flashed aloft, piercing pathways through the night and sometimes catching their prey and

PLANE PLANT STRIKE SHOWDOWN NOW NEAR

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 15 (AP)—Events moved rapidly toward a showdown today in a threatened strike which would affect work on $11,400,000 of military planes at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. plant here.

Power to call a walkout, should a settlement fail on demands sought in a labor contract, was voted last night by 731 of the company's approximately 1600 employes to CIO United Automobile Workers' Union negotiator. L. W. Michener, regional UAW director, said only 27 employes voted against the proposal and one cast a blank ballot.

Intervention by the national advisory defense commission appeared likely to observers here in an attempt to break a deadlock in negotiations and avert the strike.

Joint conferences between union and company representatives were broken off Monday. The impasse was on the union's demand for a minimum wage increase from 50 to 75 cents an hour.

FLAMES IN THE NIGHT—Battered and fired by a new and terrible kind of destruction in the form of an explosive incendiary bomb, London falls prey to the Nazi raiders in the horrible night of Dec. 29 . . . with fires and explosions taking a heavy toll. Here's a scene near St. Paul's Cathedral (shown in background), where hundreds of structures were reduced to smouldering shells. The new bomb, designed to penetrate rooftops before exploding, spread fires over a wide area of the city. (Other picture on back page.)

Grain Shortage Cuts Japs' Beer Drinking

TOKYO, Jan. 15 (AP)—A war shortage of malt-made beer has led to self-imposed rationing by Japanese hotels and other sellers of beverages.

Tokyo's largest hotel, the Imperial, with 400 guests, today set a daily limit of nine gallons for all its bars, with only one fifth of a gallon bottle sold to a guest.

17 Cats, 9 Dogs Spell Divorce

It was bad enough starting with six cats and four dogs, but when the house finally became over-run with 17 cats and nine dogs, it was too much, a Quincy jeweler testified in Norfolk probate court at Dedham.

William A. Seeley thus won an uncontested divorce from Helen Seeley of Braintree, whom he married at Quincy on Nov. 15, 1930, before, he said, she became addicted to dogs and cates in multiples.

They were all over the house, he testified, sleeping on chairs and beds and leaving no room for him. And on cold days they refused to go out although he had to.

Seeley said trouble started four days after the marriage, and 11 days after that the couple separated, to be estranged for eight years.

His mother's illness brought them together again, according to his testimony, and it was after this that she took a fancy to dogs and cats.

He said that on one occasion, in 1939, after the reconciliation, he came home and found eight watches that he had repaired missing. He went to her mother's home, where his wife also was, and when he demanded the watches, he said, Helen set upon him with a broom.

Police were called, and the Seeleys have not lived together since.

Fears Poverty So Kills Wife

LONDON, Jan. 15 (AP) — Professor Arthur Lloyd-James, English language expert charged formally today with slaying his wife, was quoted in Hampstead court as saying he killed her to save her from a "bleak future," when he found "I could not cope with my work."

She was a popular violin virtuoso who taught and played as Elsie Owen. Her body was found yesterday in their Hampstead home.

A police officer told the court the 56-year-old professor said after his arrest last night:

"I thought my powers were failing, and I could not cope with my work. Rather than expect her to face a bleak future, I decided she should die and not be asked to face it. I thought I would also kill myself."

"I DIDN'T SAY IT"

Once during the officer's testimony, Lloyd-James rose suddenly as if to interrupt, but he resumed his seat without speaking.

Asked later in court whether he had any questions, the professor declared:

"I was going to say, I didn't think I said the words that you mention, that I would take my own life."

The officer repeated his testimony, but Lloyd-James insisted:

"I do not think I said it."

The officer said Lloyd-James agreed to make a written statement, but when the forms were brought in he said, "'My brain will not function,'" and refused to write.

After the testimony by the officer, the professor, linguistic adviser of the British Broadcasting Corp., was ordered held for another hearing Jan. 24.

APPEARS DAZED

Lloyd-James appeared dazed when he took the prisoners' stand, and gazed at the floor while a police officer told of finding Elsie Owen's body yesterday afternoon on the drawing room floor of the Lloyd-James home.

The policeman said he later noticed scratches on the prisoner's left cheek and bloodstains on his shirt cuffs. He said Lloyd-James told him:

"We were so happy. I wanted her to die while she was like that. I had been in a nursing home with a nervous breakdown. We were so happy."

Police were said to have taken a large fork, a hammer and a poker from his home in their investigation. At the time of Lloyd-James' arrest last night, it was reported his wife had been stabbed to death.

The couple's son, David, is a member of the RAF volunteer reserve

Downey, Wife Will Discuss Separation

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15 (INS)— Barbara Bennett, discussing her projected separate maintenance suit against her husband, Morton Downey, Irish tenor, said that she will not take "any irrevocable stand until I have given my husband a chance to talk things over."

Barbara Bennett

The sister of screen stars Joan and Constance Bennett and daughter of the veteran actor, Richard Bennett, earlier announced she planned to file the suit.

But today she said she had talked by telephone with Downey, who is doing a singing engagement in New Orleans, and that he was going to leave for Hollywood as soon as possible in an effort to talk things over and "seek an understanding."

Mary X. Sullivan Exercises . . . Alternately Bringing Up Knees to Meet Chin

By MARY X. SULLIVAN

THIRD DAY OF THE SLIMMING SAGA

Boys and girls, it works! I lost a pound. So what's one little measly pound out of 129? Well, it means that today I weigh only 128, and that gives me courage to go on.

When I stepped on the scales today at the reducing stable . . . Pardon, salon . . . my heart was in my mouth. On account of I had been cheating, already.

I ate yesterday with due regard for my diet. Broiled chicken (delicious, too) for dinner, with two vegetables, no potatoes or cranberry jelly; tomato juice appetizer, coffee and no dessert. For breakfast I had a slice of buttered toast, orange juice and coffee, and for lunch a small fruit salad, with lemon juice.

A SCOTCH AND SODA

But I might as well tell the truth . . . I had a Scotch and soda last night. All right, then, I had two. I got talked into it. (Someone said "What'll you have?")

I've been investigating this calorie business, and I know that two Scotch highballs add them on. So I was mighty relieved to find after my session in the gym, that I had lost even one pound.

On my third day of noble experiment, I went to the gym for the second time. I'm planning on three mornings a week. The first thing I did was to get a new costume.

"One of the best ways to reduce is to perspire freely," said my instructress, "so we'll fix you up if you just bring a sweater and some sneakers. So here's what I wear from now on:

Long, fleece-lined gray jersey pants. (Cute!)

A slip-on sweater, with a sweatshirt over it.

Heavy wool socks.

And underneath it all, a wide band of rubber, pinned around my ample middle. Not elastic or pretty satiny pink material . . . just plain, heavy inner-tube material.

DOGGED WORK

Thus nattily attired, I went through my setting-up exercises. I went through them doggedly, stretching obediently as I was reminded to do so, and enjoyed it as much as I enjoy sitting in the dentist's chair getting a tooth drilled.

I lay flat on my back on the exercise table and relaxed for a moment. It felt good. But immediately I had to start on my second lap. Here are the exercises I did on the table:

1—Lying flat on your back, try to raise yourself to a sitting position with hands clasped behind your neck. (I couldn't do it, so she let me keep my hands by my sides.) Lie yourself down slowly, trying to touch the spine to the table all the way. (5 times.)

2—Same position; raise legs straight up from the hips, let them down very slowly. (This sounds easy, but it kills you.) (5 times.)

3—Scissors number. Keeping knees straight, move legs up and down, scissors fashion, keeping them close to the table.

4—Another scissors . . . this time crossing the legs over and under one another. Keep them low, near the table.

THAT'S NOT ALL

And that's not all. Then you turn on your right side, and kick your left leg as high as you can for eight counts, and then make large circles with it for eight more. Then repeat with the right.

Then you flap over on your tummy, and do a few more. First you raise one arm, then the other, as high as you can. Then you kick one leg up, high, then the other. Finally, you kick both up together. Not graceful, but painful.

At last you haul yourself down, only to do 10 deep-knee bends, holding the bar along the wall. And the electric cabinet seems a heavenly refuge, even though the temperature suggested the opposite.

Well, anyhow, I lost a pound.

A Pound! Swell, Mary! C'mon, Kid!

WOW! Mary lost a pound! Starting weight: 129. Third day weight: 128.

(Ed. Note: And does she look great! Bet she can't take that 20 off, though.)

KEEPERS SHIFTED AT MINOT'S LIGHT

Over ice-cold, choppy seas that imperilled the lives of six men, a transfer of keepers was made today by coast guardsmen at Minot's Light, off the Scituate-Cohasset shore.

Returned to their base at Scituate after taking Head Keeper George H. Fitzpatrick to the light and bringing Assistant Keeper Patrick A. Brides to shore, the Coast Guardsmen told of the tremendous difficulties under which the transfer had been made.

"Nasty seas have been running since the storm Monday that sent 120-foot waves breaking over the top of the light," Chief Boatswain's Mate S. H. Cobbett said.

"Today was the first break of any sort and Brides had already been out there three days overtime so we decided to try it.

"It was very choppy around the light, and ice kept forming on our power surf boat, so we had to be mighty careful. We made the transfer there by having a chair sling lowered out the window of the lighthouse, lashing the keeper in, then hoisting him up.

"Then we let the other man down.

"Today the sea was so rough the boat kept lifting and then dropping off. She was secured by bow and stern lines. Twice the lines on the sling broke. A couple of times it looked pretty bad.

"But Brides works five days at a stretch, supposedly — and we wanted to give him a chance to get home."

Snow, Warmer Tonight; Storm Hits Fishermen

The weather bureau today gave hope of warmer temperatures tonight and tomorrow, with light snow and freezing rain.

Today's lowest temperature reading was 12 above at 5 and 6 a. m. but from there the mercury began a slow climb that should bring it to a point slightly below freezing tonight.

Boston's official low for yesterday was a 4 above, with unofficial recordings showing eight to ten below in Middlesex County, and 17 below in Burlington, Vt. with the lowest 22 below at Ware.

Atop Mount Washington a 116-mile-an-hour gale was blowing, with the mercury at 30 below, while in the extreme northern part of Maine in Aroostook County sub-zero temperatures, gales of hurricane force and a snowstorm piled up the worst conditions of the winter.

The cold wave was a result of the terrific storm which passed New England at sea during Saturday and Sunday, damaging and smashing ships, and drawing great masses of polar air from the north toward its center.

Coastwise shipping in the Maritime Provinces scurried for shelter, and in Shelburne, N. S., alone 10 vessels of the Boston and Gloucester fishing fleets rode out the blow. Smaller vessels in Nova Scotia south shore ports were damaged by high seas, and fishermen feared their losses in lobster gear and other exposed equipment would be heavy.

The mercury dropped to 12 below through central Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont and to 16 below in northern Maine at Bangor.

Aga Kahn to Get His Weight In Diamonds

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 15 (AP) —The Aga Kahn, leader of Ismaili Mohammedans in India, East Africa and Central Asia, will receive as a gift his weight in diamonds if a campaign started today by his followers in Karachi Province is successful.

The diamonds, which it is estimated here would be worth $25,000,000, would be presented to the Aga Kahn in 1945 on the diamond jubilee of his accession to the Moslem spiritual leadership.

His followers contributed twice his weight in gold on his golden jubilee in 1935.

NAVY ASKS 400 SMALL VESSELS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (AP)—The Navy asked Congress today for authority to build 400 small vessels, including sub chasers, mine sweepers and torpedo boats, and asked also for extra facilities to construct them.

The bulk of the small craft, which will be completed in a year, would be constructed on the Great Lakes.

The 280 vessels include 36 165-foot seagoing sub chasers for use as escort vessels; 30 110-foot wooden sub chasers, 24 motor torpedo boats, 8 165-foot mine sweepers, 32 fleet mine sweepers, 90 motor mine sweepers and 50 coastal mine sweepers.

Earlier, Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, chief of ordnance, told the committee a major part of a $300,000,000 program to strengthen the fleet's anti-aircraft power would involve installation aboard larger warships of a new type of five-inch anti-aircraft gun which he said was "the best we've ever had."

He said it was effective 31,000 feet in the air and had a much greater horizontal range.

SWISS PROTEST PLANES

BERN, Switzerland, Jan. 15 (AP)—The Swiss Federal Council announced that it had made "the necessary diplomatic representations" after a session in which it discussed "obviously intentional" violation of Swiss neutrality by foreign planes flying over the country.

WORKMAN FELLED BY GAS—When Norman Young, 58, of Revere, collapsed in a sewer, a fellow worker made a heroic effort to save him, and was himself overcome by the fumes. Taken unconscious to Revere General Hospital, Young is attended by Nurse Josephine Padren. His rescuer, Michael Breen, was less seriously affected.

6 Girls Swoon As Fight Rages In High School

MIDDLETOWN, Ind., Jan. 15 (AP)—A free-for-all fight in the halls of the Middletown High school caused Township Trustee Thomas Fleming today to close the school indefinitely, pending settlement of a controversy which began in December with the ousting of the school superintendent.

Fleming said he was informed the fight started yesterday after Supt. C. R. Young had expelled Grover Wood, a senior, for a rule infraction.

Fleming said he was told student factions battled for several minutes and that five or six girls fainted. A policeman quieted the disorder.

The pupils went on strike last month after the school board dismissed Wilbur Shirey as superintendent and replaced him with Young, a Frankfort teacher. Shirey and the board differed over the hiring of a teacher.

U. S. Bombers Fly To Britain From Breakfast to Tea

LONDON, Jan. 15 (AP)—Capt. Pat Eves of British Airways ferried a United States-made bombing machine across the Atlantic between breakfast and tea, said British sources today.

The time was not given out, but it was called a record.

It is about 2000 miles from Newfoundland to the British Isles, the shortest route from North America. Modern bombers, under favorable conditions, could span the distance well under 10 hours.

The informant said the British expected hundreds of such planes will have arrived in England in the same manner by mid-summer.

GAY SENDOFF PLANNED FOR YD

Many Massachusetts cities and towns today were planning gala sendoffs for the boys of the YD, who again will answer the call of their country tomorrow.

Ten thousand strong, the 26th or Yankee Division of World War fame will report for induction at 10 armories in the state.

It will take until at least Jan. 28 to complete examinations and move the last unit to Camp Edwards, Maj. Gen. Roger W. Eckfeldt, commander said.

Ten boards of Army surgeons will launch the inductions at armories in Worcester, Springfield, Cambridge, Salem, Lawrence, Newton, New Bedford, Charlestown, the Commonwealth Armory and the 101st Infantry Armory.

Officers, who have already received preliminary examinations will undergo a final scrunity by Army surgeons tomorrow.

Up early, the men, representing practically all walks of Bay State civic and business life, will gather at 50 armories in the state to don again the YD insignia.

Field officers of the old Yankee Division, many of whom are still with the outfit, said the division still displays the spirit of the days in France 24 years ago.

Although many are putting aside their business affairs for a year, the men generally are said to be looking forward eagerly to a stretch of Army life at Camp Edwards.

Under tentative plans, headquarters of the division will be transferred to Camp Edwards on Jan. 21.

With the aid of police clearing the road, the divisionel special troops will complete their movement by truck on Jan. 23, when the 51st Artillery Brigade and the 101st Field Artillery and the 102d Field Artillery also go to camp.

HUB SEA FOOD FOR ARMY

Boston dealers today hailed the announcement by the federal government to spend $2,000,000 annually for sea food to be served to selectees in Army camps. Under chairmanship of Edward H. RUSSELL WOOD LOSES BY 4-4 COUNCIL VOTE

Gov. Saltonstall's nomination of Russell A. Wood, retiring state auditor, as chairman of the Fall River Board of Finance, failed of confirmation when the Governor's Council voted four to four today.

The governor said he would immediately resubmit Wood's name, because Councilor Frank A. Brooks of Watertown was absent from the session today, thereby costing the Republicans a vote.

This resubmission would mean that the nomination automatically would go over for another week before action again is taken.

COAKLEY AIDS G. O. P.

Although the council is nominally Democratic by 5 to 4, Councilor Daniel H. Coakley, until this first session of the new council the only Democrat in the group, joined the three attending Republicans in support of Wood.

These three were Lieut.-Gov. Horace T. Cahill, Clayton Havey of West Roxbury and Eugene Burtnett of Somerville.

Voting against confirmation were Democratic Councilors Daniel M. Walsh, Jr., of Springfield, Joseph P. Clark of Fall River, James A. Donovan of Lawrence and Edmund Burke of Worcester.

The council confirmed without trouble, however, the nominations of John J. Darcy to be presiding justice of Lawrence district court and William H. Daley to be associate justice in the same court.

TEN APPOINTMENTS

Ten appointments were submitted to the executive council by Governor Saltonstall today, including:

Fred E. Morris of Hudson, a reappointment as trial justice; Samuel T. Tisdale of Deering, public administrator in place of Abner S. McLaud; Arthur H. Damon of Scituate, re-appointment as public administrator; J. Stedman Miller of Lynn, master in chancery, in place of Frederick W. Ryan; Woodbury Howard of Lowell, master in chancery, in place of Frank J. Garvey.

Herbert A. Baker of Norwood, special justice, Dedham district court, to succeed the late James A. Halloran; Mark A. Galusha of Williamstown, asst. secretary to the Governor, to succeed Lieut.-Col. Edward D. Sirois who is entering federal service with the National Guard; George Philip Capen of Canton, executive messenger to the Governor, to succeed John P. White, also entering federal service with the Guard; James deNormandie of Lincoln, director of the Division of Livestock Disease Control, to succeed Galusha; Norman M. French of Worcester, master in chancery, in place of Frederick F. Beringer.

BUCKLEY NAMES 2 WPA MEN AS AIDES

Having come off the WPA rolls himself, an unknown, to win an astonishing nomination, and then an astonishing election, State Auditor Thomas J. Buckley was sworn in today—and immediately announced that two of his three major appointees are WPA men.

In his thronged executive offices, Governor Saltonstall swore in Buckley as Auditor, Robert T. Bushnell as the new Attorney-General, Frederic W. Cook again as Secretary of State and William E. Hurley again as State Treasurer.

BUSHNELL'S AIDES

A short time later the Governor swore in the 16 assistants whom Atty.-Gen. Bushnell had designed in the past few days.

In addition, immediately after taking over the flower-decked Attorney-General's office from Paul A. Dever, the new incumbent announced the appointment of Roger W. Robinson of Concord as an investigator.

Robinson, a star fullback for Duke University who played in the 1939 Rose Bowl game on the Coast, was graduated from Duke last June.

He is the son of Charles S. Robinson, court officer in Middlesex superior court and a long-time friend of Bushnell.

For Treasurer Hurley it was the last time he can be sworn in for that office successively, this being his third, the limit allowed by law.

For the veteran Cook it was old stuff, today's swearing in being his 11th experience in the office.

Bushnell also is a veteran at taking the oath of office, but for Buckley it was the first time and he appeared a bit nervous during the brief ceremonies.

OVERFLOW THRONG

So great was the throng, most of them for the newcomers Bushnell and Buckley, that the overflow went out into the corridor.

Buckley had prepared carefully at his Chestnut st., Beacon Hill, home for this day of days and had walked to the State House with his brother and chief aide in the campaign, William Buckley, retired Boston policeman.

They visited the state auditor's offices before the ceremony and were greeted by the retiring auditor, Russell A. Wood, and the entire staff.

It was then that Buckley made known to the Boston Evening American his first appointments in his new role—two of them being, like Buckley, former WPA workers.

NAMES EVELETH DEPUTY

As first deputy at $4800 a year he named Herbert M. Eveleth, 35, of New Park st., Lynn, who resigned as assitant State director of the Division of Finance, WPA.

As second deputy at $3500 he named John J. Welsh of East Boston, who has been co-ordinator of finance for the WPA, and as third deputy, also at $3500, former Rep. Alexander Sullivan of East Boston.

It is probable that Buckley will appoint Miss Victoria Trapassa of Dexter ave., Watertown, as his secretary. She aided him during his campaigne and was assisting him at the auditor's office today.

Buckley's first act in the flower-strewn office was to confer with his new appointees on his budget for 1941-42, and then to go into the mail.

Almost immediately he came up out of the pile with a Lowell publication, "The Optic," which carried his picture and a headline reading, "Our Next Governor, Thomas Buckley."

"That's hot, isn't it?" he laughed. "It doesn't interest me. I've got too many things to think of now."

Chesterfield's

MILDER, BETTER TASTE

Capt. JOHN M. MILLER, America's No. 1 autogiro pilot and pioneer of the world's only wingless mail plane route between Camden, N. J. and the Philadelphia Post Office, is shown here enjoying Chesterfield's new interesting book "TOBACCOLAND, U. S. A."

To the keen interest of the thousands of men and women who visit our Chesterfield factories, we owe the idea of publishing the book, "TOBACCOLAND, U. S. A." It is a comprehensive picture story about the growing, curing and processing of tobacco, telling you why Chesterfields are MILDER, COOLER-SMOKING and BETTER-TASTING.

We are proud of the hundreds of letters from smokers like yourself who have seen "TOBACCOLAND, U. S. A." Many have asked us to send copies to their friends. We would take pleasure in sending you a copy—just mail your request to Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., 630 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Hull Bitterly Lashes Nazis, Italians, Japs

vade and conquer, peaceful nations shall wait until the invader crosses their boundary lines—or whether they shall recognize that this is a world movement of conquest and invoke the law of self defense before it is too late.

"That is the question," Hull declared emphatically. "We can take our choice."

When other committeemen had finished their interrogation of the State Department chief, Rep. Tinkham (R.) of Massachusetts undertook a line of inquiry which carried the session far beyond noon, the usual recess hour, and produced several heated exchanges with the witness.

BRUSH WITH TINKHAM

Once the bewhiskered Bostonian asked whether the President could commit an act of war under the proposed British aid legislation.

"The President or any naval officer in command of a ship could commit an act of war any hour of the day without this bill," Hull shot back.

He added that the measure gave no new powers to those already possessed by the chief executive in that respect.

Tinkham pressed his point and Bloom intervened to say that Hull already had answered the question.

"Evasively, in my opinion," Tinkham angrily remarked.

Once or twice, a question of obtaining information from the State Department came up in the discussion. This led Hull to tell Tinkham sharply:

"My door has been open for the last eight years and you have never darkened it in quest of information."

The audience guffawed, and Tinkham, momentarily taken aback, finally commented that he had obtained some information from the State Department, although not directly from Hull and had been "much disturbed."

RECALLS CIVIL WAR CRITICS

"Frankly, I thought you wanted to be disturbed when I sent you the information," Hull said.

Tinkham, in his persistent interrogation, inquired whether the measure would confer greater powers on the President than any given any Chief Executive with the possible exception of President Wilson during the World War.

"Oh, there were people during the Civil War talking like you," Hull replied.

To set forth fully his views on the question raised by Johnson, Hull took up one by one laws that might be involved, and ended his discussion with the statement:

"Only the law of self defense can be evoked from any practical viewpoint."

WOULD SUPERSEDE LAWS

Among the laws he cited were the neutrality and Johnson acts. He said that they would be superseded by the President's proposals.

The Hague convention of 1907 also would not apply, he testified, because it was "not applicable to the present European war" since by its terms it is inoperative unless all belligerents are parties to it.

It was Rep. Johnson also who asked whether in the secretary's judgment the lend-lease bill was "absolutely necessary to the defense of the United States."

Hull said he had "very unwillingly been driven to the conclusion" that it was.

At another point, he stated his belief that "the most practical force in prosecuting steps in our national defense is not merely to arm at home, but if and when we see a country resisting the same movement, which probably would be headed straight for South America, we would not command the disrespect of the invader if he sees we are taking steps to resist by aiding those who are right in the line of the invader."

Rep. Fish (R.) of New York asked whether Hull would object to the committee's rewriting the legislation to bring it "within the Constitution."

"Well," Hull retorted quickly, "I'd want to have something to say about what the Constitution provides."

Laughter swept the crowded room for the first time since the hearing had started an hour before.

CANNOT SIT STILL

Rep. Burgin (D.) of North Carolina inquired whether there was more danger of war in the course of British-aid proposed by the Administration or in what he called this country's former policy of neutrality. Hull replied he had come to the conclusion that "we could not sit still with our hands folded until an invader crosses the border."

He said that he had seen Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium have "handcuffs snapped on them before they could cock their guns" by following a neutral course.

"It occurred to me after these events," he said, "that the invading countries would have more respect for us if we began to defend ourselves in time."

Graphically, Hull described the forces to be opposed as "the tidal wave of conquest" and he several times stressed his view that speed is "the essence of the problem."

As to the mechanics of "which well we should draw the water from," he said he was certain that Congress and the Treasury would encounter "no serious problem" in seeking an answer "to this urgent question.

The State Department chief replied at one point to persons, who, he said, claimed that since Germany had not crossed the British channel she could not cross the Atlantic.

"German forces could cross the channel in an hour's time," Hull declared, "were it not for the fact that Britain, now thoroughly prepared and well armed, is fighting every hour of the day to prevent that crossing and is fortified with every known device to repel a landing. The 20 miles of water between continental Europe and Britain are under British, not German, control."

He also said that to withhold aid to victims of attack "would not result in a restoration of peace" but would "merely tend to perpetuate the enslavement of nations already invaded and subjugated and provide an opportunity for the would-be conquerors to gather strength for an attack against us."

The latter, he said, "have disregarded every right of neutral nations, even of those to which they themselves had given solemn pledges of inviolability."

"Their constantly employed weapons for the government of their unfortunate victims," he added, "are unrestricted terrorization; firing squads, deceit, forced labor, confiscation of property, concentration camps and deprivations of every sort."

Hull described the measure as one which would "make it possible for us to allocate our resources in ways best calculated to provide for the security of this nation and of this continent."

Above all, he declared, "it will do all of these things in the speediest possible manner, and, overwhelmingly, speed is our greatest need today."

PLAN TYRANNICAL RULE

In a comprehensive review of the international situation, Hull declared that three nations—Germany, Japan and Italy—had made abundantly clear "their determination to repudiate and destroy the very foundations of a civilized world order under law and to enter upon the road of armed conquest, of subjugation of other nations, and of tyrannical rule over their victims."

In describing the importance of control of the high seas, the secretary declared that "should that control be gained by the partners of th tripartite pact (Germany, Italy and Japan) the danger to our country, great as it is today, would be multiplied many fold."

"Were Britain defeated and were she to lose command of the seas, Germany could easily cross the Atlantic, especially the South Atlantic, unless we were ready and able to do what Britain is doing now," the Secretary of State said. "Were the Atlantic to fall into German control the Atlantic would offer little or no assurance of security."

The secretary urged the importance of giving maximum material assistance to Britain and the other countries fighting the Axis powers.

Hull asserted that "the proposed so-called new order" in the Pacific means the domination by one country to the exclusion of the interests of other nations.

Appearing before the House foreign affairs committee, the Secretary of State declared that "such a program for the subjugation and exploitation" of so many people by one nation was of "great concern" to the entire world.

Nevertheless, he said, the United States has tried to show Japan that her best interests would be in friendly relations with this nation.

HEARING DELAYED

Hull made these statements on the Pacific situation as the foreign affairs committee began hearings on President Roosevelt's proposed lease-lend bill to aid Great Britain and other nations "resisting aggression."

Chairman Bloom. (D.) of New York started the hearing at 10:26 a. m. (E. S. T.)—26 minutes late. Hull prefaced his remarks by saying he wanted to "apologize for what was an unavoidable delay."

"I did the best I could," he said.

The Secretary began by saying that he did not intend to discuss details of the bill, asserting that that would be done by others.

But he said he preferred to place before the committee "the facts" of the dangers which he said confronted the Western Hemisphere "and therefore this country."

Wheeler Retorts to F.D. Lashing

By JACK VINCENT

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (INS)—The bitter clash between President Roosevelt and Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D.) of Montana, in which the chief executive employed the words "rottenest" and "dastardly," today forecast a knock-down, drag-out fight on the Senate floor over the Administration's bill to lend or lease war materials to Britain.

The row was precipitated after Wheeler, a leader of the Senate non-intervention bloc, charged that Mr. Roosevelt's program amounted to a "triple A foreign policy designed to plow under every fourth American boy.

President Roosevelt, at a press conference, retorted that he regarded talk like Wheeler's "as the most untruthful, the most dastardly, the most unpatriotic thing that has ever been said in my generation."

"You may quote me on that," the President said for emphasis; "that really is the rottenest thing that has been said in my generation."

Wheeler replied:

"Apparently the President lost his temper. I sincerely hope that my statement will be proven to be untrue and that no American boys will be plowed under because of this Administration's war-minded policy.

"Nothing could be more unpatriotic than to try to fan the passions of the American people to the point where they will accept a program that will eventually send American boys to be killed upon foreign battlefields.

"I am not unmindful that the President has said that no American boys will be sent abroad. But I submit to the American people that every speech that has been made by President Roosevelt since his election has been one tending to bring this country step by step into this foreign war."

President Roosevelt's foreign policy was assailed by Sen. Nye (R.) of North Dakota, today.

The President will "brook no opposition" and has "lost his poise," Nye said, referring to Mr. Roosevelt's bitter criticism of Sen. Wheeler (D.) of Montana, who charged that the Administration is pursuing a "triple A" foreign policy designed "to plow under every fourth American boy."

"Mr. Roosevelt doesn't seem to realize what a lot of us are seeing—that the increasingly dangerous approach to war by the Administration is going to put to shame the economic aftermath of the last war," he added.

"If carried to its conclusion without opposition, the Administration's program will lead to war and multiply by many times the cemeteries and veterans' hospitals' populations."

RAF Bombs Blast Nazi Norway Bases

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Jan. 15 (INS)—In a series of daring round-trip flights of more than 600 miles each, RAF pilots last night flew blind through treacherous weather and bombed at least four German bases in southern Norway, it was announced today.

The Nazi Luftwaffe meanwhile ended more than 24 hours' respite enforced by the weather, when German planes returned to the attack on England. First raiders after the lull, which also kept the RAF from pounding the French coast, made their appearance over an East Anglian town. A lone raider also machine-gunned a village in northern Scotland and dropped a single bomb.

Despite severe snowstorms over the Straits of Dover, German warplanes also carried out "hit and run" raids on Southern England. One raider dropped a number of bombs on a southeastern village. All except one of the explosives landed in the marshland outside of the town.

RAF raiding planes encountered severe icing conditions, snow and electrical storms, the air ministry reported. Radio sets of two of the bombers were blown to fragments by lightning bolts.

All the planes used on the long hazardous flight were American-made Hudsons, the communique said.

"Last night a small number of aircraft of the coastal command attacked enemy air bases at Mandal, Forus and other targets in Norway," said an official announcement.

"Bad weather made observation difficult, but bombs were seen to hit the airdrome at Mandal.

"One of or aircraft secured two direct hits on a motorship in Stavanger roads. Another bombed an important railroad birdge. All British aircraft returned safely."

London Waits Nazi Air Blow in South

LONDON, Jan. 15 (AP)—Strong aerial attacks on the British Mediterranean fleet probably will be made by the Nazi air force, military sources said today, to clear the way for shipment of German troops to Africa.

These sources characterized the attack by German dive bombers on a British naval flotilla Jan. 10 as "the first gun of the offensive."

Military sources said if German luftwaffe units based in Sicily were able to destroy British naval supremacy in the Mediterranean, Germany would undoubtedly begin sending troops across the Sicilian channel, which lies between Sicily and Tunisia, to bolster Marshal Graziani's forces in Libya.

Despite the potential danger of such an offensive, there was little fear in London that the Germans would be successful.

Greeks Repulse Italian Attacks

ATHENS, Jan. 15 (AP)—Greek forces were reported today to have resumed their advance toward Berati, in Central Albania, after throwing back two Italian counter-attacks described by a spokesman as constituting an "offensive on a very restricted scale."

Bad weather curtailed operations somewhat along the entire front.

Italians Say Libya Line Still Holds

ROME, Jan. 15 (AP)—British armored car attacks on Italian outposts on the Sudanese frontier were repulsed, the Italian high command reported today.

The daily war bulletin said also there had been artillery and patrol activity around Tobruk, on the Libyan coast, and the oasis post at Giarabub, 150 miles south of Bardia.

More War Orders For N. E. Firms

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (AP)—The War Department announced today the award of these contracts to New England concerns:

Indian Motorcycle Co., Springfield, Mass., motorcycles, $219,048; Hope Webbing Co., Providence, R. I., component parts for cartridge belts, $155,536; Russell Mfg. Co., Middletown, Conn., component parts for cartridge belts, $155,993; Atwater Mfg. Co., Plantsville, Conn., steel plugs, $118,125.

Torpedoing of Greek Freighter Revealed

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—The 5175-ton Greek freighter Nikos T. was torpedoed and sunk recently in a submarine attack on a British convoy 500 miles west of Ireland, shipping circles reported today.

The 400-foot vessel was said to have been with the Goodleigh, a British freighter of 5448 tons, which radioed Dec. 2 that she had been torpedoed.

Phillips Bears No Word to Duce or King

ROME, Jan. 15 (AP)—The United States ambassador to Italy, William Phillips, returned to his post today without a message, he said, for either King Vittorio Emanuele or Premier Mussolini.

FAR-FLUNG U. S. PACIFIC BASES READY TO MEET ANY CHALLENGE

(Far out in the blue Pacific lies Hawaii, a tropical paradise. But Hawaii is more than a paradise now. It is a fortress upon which may rest the welfare of the United States. In Washington, the situation in the Pacific is watched with concern. The following article is the third in a series comprising a frank exposition of the military situation in Hawaii.)

By RICHARD HALLER
International News Service Special Correspondent

HONOLULU, Jan. 15—The United States' Pacific spearhead of defense is ready to withstand any attack that could come from the west.

That is not an official statement from any authorized spokesman for the Navy; it is an opinion quietly and confidently expressed by persons competent to judge and familiar with the progress of extensive preparations.

This confidence is in contrast with the Navy state of mind that prevailed at the time Ambassador Joseph Grew first told the Japanese government in Tokyo that America would be gravely concerned over any efforts to expand toward or into the Netherland Indies. His remarks caused the first serious tension and inspired appraisals of the preparedness of the Navy.

There was a general feeling at that time the Navy was not ready but recently new confidence has come with completion of certain important links in the defense chain.

BIG JOBS FINISHED

Not much is said outside 14th. naval district headquarters about how things are getting along, but it is definitely known that certain big jobs have been finished and others are far enough along to be used.

Hawaii is approximately in the center of the Alaska-Hawaii-Panama circle. In event of attack that circle will become the front line of Pacific defense. One year ago there was little in Alaska and nothing between Alaska and Hawaii or between Hawaii and Panama.

Now there are new bases at Midway and Wake Islands to the northwest of Hawaii, and more new bases at Canton, Palmyra and other islands to the south along the equator.

If and when an attack ever comes this chain of defenses will hold the attackers 2400 or more miles away from the Parific coast, and any fleet attempting to penetrate the chain would find itself in serious trouble. Distances between the various islands can be spanned easily by squadrons of huge navy patrol bombers.

TRAPS DOT AREA

Submarines and destroyers and mine layers would veritably dot the stretches of ocean, and the bigger fighting craft would speedily whittle down any remaining portions that might get through.

And the defenses of Oahu, main island of the Hawaiian group, where the biggest and strongest naval base in the world is situated, are just as prepared. There are enough batteries of powerful coast artillery to rake the ocean for miles. There are enough army planes at two huge army airbases to cloud the skies.

Some of this defense is old, most of it is new. The number of fighting planes has been more than doubled, possibly even tripled. How many new coast defense guns are in position can only be guessed, but the number is said to be large. There has also been a stepup in such equipment as aircraft detectors and anti-aircraft searchlights.

DOUBLE PURPOSE

New defenses at Midway and Wake and the equatorial islands serve a two-fold purpose. Primarily they are air bases to facilitate patrol of the first line of defense, but they are also fuelling stations for small surface craft.

Strategy of the air defense in those areas is based on flexibility. Big portions of the air force could move from one base to another so swiftly as to bewilder completely any attacking forces.

Keystone of the whole system is Pearl Harbor. There are the machine shops for overhaul, drydocks for repairs, warehouses for food and supplies, connections with vast ammunition dumps and pipe lines leading to oil tanks buried in solid rock. Command, direction of defense tactics and service of maintenance and supply would all be centered there.

New facilities have been building for more than a year; some are finished, some are far enough along to use and the order of the day is hurry. The whole job of building up the Pacific defenses will not be completed for about two years, but it is already far enough along so that it can now be said:

The first line of America's defense is ready.

The fourth article in this series will be printed in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

BRITISH, NAZIS BOTH WANT IRISH SEA BASES

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

When the European belligerents get to accusing each other of having the self-same scheme in mind, it's a fair guess that the thoughts of both of them do indeed run in the same channel.

I have a feeling that's the way the wind blows in the matter of the strategic naval bases of Eire (Southern Ireland). England and Germany are charging each other with intending to invade neutral Ireland to occupy these ports—which would be worth their weight in rubies to either side—and personally I wouldn't bet a ha'penny that both aren't right.

It wouldn't be surprising to see the two of them, at any moment now, racing for Southern Ireland to snatch these prizes. Each can use the customary explanation for such operations—that he was forced to act in order to head the other fellow off.

The respective viewpoints of Britain and Nazidom are these:

Use of these bases is among England's most pressing needs to enable her to combat the grave dangers of the German submarine campaign against shipping.

Should Hitler occupy strategic points in Eire, he would acquire ideal naval and air bases to strengthen his attack on British vessels. These bases also would increase Nazi chances for a successful invasion of Britain, since she would have to defend herself against attacks from both east and west.

Small wonder then that uneasy Eire should be sitting in a mighty drafty spot, with no better place to go. However, Prime Minister Eamon De Valera has squared his chin against desertion of neutrality, and Eire has sworn to fight if any one of the belligerents sets foot upon a shamrock.

Having known Mr. De Valera for many years, I can testify that he is a fighter. His point in refusing to abandon neutrality and allow Britain to use the bases in question is that if he does so he immediately turns Eire into a battlefield for the Nazis and Allies. London challenges the wisdom of this argument, though there can be no doubt of its truth.

The ports involved are Cobh (Queenstown) on the south coast, Bantry bay on the southwest and Lough Swilly on the northwest. As in the World War, many brave ships are going to their deaths off the coast of the Emerald isle. It will be recalled the Lusitania was torpedoed off Queenstown.

In the last conflict, however, the British had these naval bases and were able to combat the U-boat menace. Were it not for England's big naval base at Belfast, in Northern Ireland, there's no telling how much of a disaster the Nazis might have piled up already with their sinkings of Allied shipping in those waters.

The British position today is as serious. Germany's occupation of the continental Channel ports has enabled her to render the big harbors on the east and south shores of Britain virtually unusable for transoceanic shipping. For that matter, little Atlantic commerce is able to pass even into the Irish sea from the south because of the nearness of the Nazi U-boat and air bases in France.

This means that most of Britain's transoceanic shipping has to take the far route up round northern Ireland and then down to such ports as Glasgow and Liverpool. So grave is the pass in that this route has become pretty much a lifeline to beleaguered Britain.

The Germans are able to strike from both France and Norway at this vital commerce because the British lack the Irish bases which would move her defenses some 200 miles nearer the lifeline. That 200 miles might spell the difference between security and disaster.

In view of this critical situation it is easy to see that Eire's neutrality might be shot to pieces at any time.

Should the Germans invade Ireland they would immediately encounter large British forces which are maintained in Northern Ireland, as well as airplanes both from Northern Ireland and Britain.

Then Premier De Valera's fears that Ireland will be turned into a battlefield would become a reality.

Take Charge, Mister—and Let's Fireball!

THERE'S a new word spreading through the vocabularies of car owners who have made firsthand acquaintances with this slick new 1941 Buick.

It's a word we first picked out as an apt description of a new and better engine—but it is rapidly coming to mean a completely new and excitingly pleasurable manner of motorcar travel.

All over the country, "to fireball" now means to enjoy both ease and dispatch in your travel by car—with a very special new manner of thrift.

Not the ordinary, scrimpy, self-denying sort of thrift, but thrift with all the thrills left in!

Now, just why that happens is easy to understand.

Reenforced by Compound Carburetion* this FIREBALL eight develops nearly 17% more horsepower on exactly the same fuel rationing.

With all that power on call, we can use a more economical gear ratio as our standard high gear—a ratio that ups miles per gallon by giving more revolutions of the wheels for every revolution of the engine.

Then, in addition, we have in Compound Carburetion a fuel supply system that adjusts itself according to the driving conditions you meet.

Thus your engine is always getting the utmost benefit out of the least amount of gasoline that will give the performance you want.

And that spells economy.

So much economy that a man who drives 15,000 miles a year gets as much as 2,000 miles' extra driving on the same amount of fuel.

And that, Buick buyers will tell you, is something very much worth looking into through a free demonstration such as any Buick dealer will gladly give.

BUICK PRICES BEGIN AT $935 for the Business Coupe

Hub Men Blast 'Foe' Raid at Camp Hulen

sometimes not. It was cold, with a penetrating north wind blowing across the flats, but Boston's 211th, teefered and uistered against the chill, enjoyed it with the nerve-tense concentration of players in a team game. And presently bugles sounded the soft, plaintive notes of "recall," the crews hooded their machines like giant falcons, gathered their gear and rolled home to camp, and sound slumber. They sang as they went—"Roll Out the Barrel."

After four months the 211th—many of them youthful striplings when they first appeared in Hulen, are inured to discomforts, slogging through slippery clay that cakes hard as cement, facing slanting gusts of Gulf rain, eating army grub and meeting strict camp routine. The early throes of homesickness have gone, and the men I talked to said they liked it, and invariably, "Hell, it's all right when you get used to it." Signs of physical and moral hardness!

The 211th's regimental guardhouse is a green hut, cement-floored, where Sgt. Gerald Harper of Plymouth commanded an H Battery squad which huddled in overcoats around a wood burning Sibley stove, and slept, sprawled or whiled away the tedium between their next sentry-go.

Harper has no prisoner now and guard duty resolves into a boresome round of walking post (there are five in the regimental area) and saluting officers with a stiff slap of hands on gun butts and a smart click of boot heels.

PRIDE IN PRECISION

The men take pride in their precision. He had had a prisoner said the sergeant, but a regimental court martial had turned him free—a married non-com who, overcome with nostalgia for home and familiar surroundings, had gone AWOL for a couple of months. But he had returned to camp voluntarily, so they just "busted him down a buck," added two months to his "hitch" and confined him to camp limits for a while.

Harper, a slight, sandy-haired lad, grinned. Obviously he thought it a soft touch, and, according to wartime standards, it was. But training calls for a measure of lenience and the 211th court doesn't turn the screws down.

Nearby Col. Stewart Hall's HQ. is the regimental barber shop, a dingy little hut externally, but trim and sanitary inside. There, for half the usual civilian fee, a quintet of soldier-barbers, professional sartorialists in civilian life, trim the fuzz from their enlisted mates' crowns or scrape whisker scraggles from a chin.

Four of the barbers were on company duty—Jerry Daley of Waltham, Hob Narcissi of Brockton, Paul Bergosian of Hopkinton and Carl Tagliaferro of Boston. But Mike Toto of Framingham was operating on Private Bob Rutledge's jaw and filling his lather-rimmed ears with the inevitable barber's chatter. For here is the regimental "rumor exchange," the spot where hearsay gossip germinates and spreads like an epidemic through the company streets.

Soldiers thrive on rumor and the 211th is no exception. They're going to be shifted back to New England in early spring. They're gonna be split up among regiments of recruit "selectives." They're going to be inducted into permanent army service. They're being divided among the regular U. S. 69th, freshly arrived in camp. So they go, some perhaps with a grain of truth, but most a mere fantasia.

OUTFIT ON MARCH

Most of the 211th, not on fatigue or training duty, watched curiously as the 69th swung off the Palacios turnpike and into the rutted roads of Hulen. They were a big-boned, firm-chinned and muscular outfit, who marched route-step with an easy swagger and eyed the roadside watchers from the 211th, 197th (New Hampshire) and 203d (Mississippi) with mutual interest.

The banter that passed back and forth was the same familiar lingo of the old World War:

"What outfit, buddy?" "How's the hash?" "Geez, whatta playground!"

The 69th were in full marching order, with 40-pound packs and under conical shaped campaign hats. They looked fit, bronzed and lean.

Back in the regimental area the First Battalion was preparing to shove off for Indianola, Texas, a 49-mile roll to the South through drear, unblessed surroundings, where they could get their first experience in "calibrating," trial-shots with the 3-inch guns, and intensive instructions with the smaller, automatic guns—the short-snouted 37's and longer 50's.

Guns, searchlights, reconnaissance cars, rolling kitchens and trucks lined the roadsides while the men of the "First," in a motley of blue denim, olive drab tunics and mustard-serge blouses stowed their duffle and adjusted guns. This promised action and soldiers, noncoms and officers were agog with delight.

A month of military picnicking on the deserted, sandy stretches of 'Ola Beach, four weeks of rusticating under canvas, studying the intricate advanced work of "position selection," service practice, use of weapons, marches and convoys, and then back to Hulen, more hardening and more rumors. The days when they were part-time military duffers with once-a-week drills in the Cadet Armory at the junction of Arlington and Stuart sts. in Boston was very, very far behind.

They were qualified, muscle-hardened soldiers now! The gleam in their eyes and the angle of their chins said so. "Roll Out The Barrels," not barrels of amber foamy brew but barrels of camouflage green barrels of hard, axle steel, barrels with fluted internal, rotating grooves that throw high explosive and stun by concussion at 100 feet. The barrels were rolling out!

FAITHFUL IN DEATH—These three dogs and six almost-wild cats faced police today when they attempted to search the small furniture repair shop of John Balkin, 56, who dropped dead today. Police sought clues to relatives of the man, who had lived as a recluse in his Roxbury shop for many years.

N. E. Gets More War Orders

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15 (AP)—The War Department announced today the award of these contracts to New England concerns:

Death Reveals Recluse, Pets

The cold and bitter life of a Roxbury recluse who lived only with his three dogs and six cats was revealed when the man died today.

John Balkin, 56, of Columbus ave., proprietor of a cabinet-making and furniture repair shop, staggered into a bakery owned by John DiAngelus in Columbus ave. today and collapsed.

Police said they had not been able to find relatives immediately. If no Balkin kin is found, police will search the shop and home.

Sergt. Edward Leary, forcing his way into Balkin's shop, was repulsed by three snarling dogs. Finally capturing the animals, he tied them up, only to find six cats slinking about the cold, dim-lit room in which Balkin had lived.

Sergt. Leary said the cats that had been eating slices of raw meat, were almost wild and refused to let him approach. He called the Animal Rescue League.

Officers said Balkin had lived alone in a room behind his shop. The shop itself, they said, was filled with an accumulation of dusty bric-a-brac, gathered over years.

2 KILLERS QUICKLY INDICTED

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—Less than 25 hours after two gunmen killed a patrolman and a civilian during a holdup and chase in the crowded midtown shopping area, two ex-convict brothers were indicted today for murder.

The indictment of the men, booked as William Esposito, 28, and Anthony Esposito, 35, was voted by the New York County Grand Jury 20 minutes after the district attorney's office began the presentation of evidence collected from some 85 witnesses to yesterday's shooting on Fifth ave. at 34th st.

GUARD AT BEDS

Besides the men who were killed, three persons were wounded: William Esposito, shot in the leg by the patrolman he killed, and a taxi driver and a bank guard who went to the patrolman's aid.

Meanwhile, Asst. Dist. Atty. Jacob J. Rosenblum said four additional guards had been placed near the beds of the prisoners in the Bellevue Hospital prison ward, because he had received word they would try to escape.

At the same time, police suggested the possibility that a third man might have been involved in the holdup and gun battle which terrorized hundreds of shoppers.

CARRIED SIX GUNS

A probation office report on the brothers showed they had begun a career in crime by snatching purses. The report classified them as "confirmed social outlaws."

Valentine said that when a priest visited them last night Anthony shouted:

"Get out of here; I quit talking to you guys 30 years ago."

The police ballistics bureau said 14 shots were discharged in the $650 holdup and chase, from five of the six guns the brothers carried.

Ru-Ex Compound is for sale and recommended by Liggett's and drug stores everywhere.

FLU HITS HOSPITAL STAFF

While State Public Health officials reported grippe on the wane throughout Massachusetts, a call went out today at Boston City Hospital for volunteer nurses.

Old graduates or other nurses unengaged were requested to report to Dr. Charles H. Pelton, acting superintendent, who said the usual compensation for special nurses would be paid.

The emergency has resulted from the fact that 89 of the City Hospital's 737 nurses have contracted respiratory ailments and 40 orderlies are on sick leave.

Postmaster Peter F. Tague announced that more than 600 clerks and carriers in the Boston Postal district had come down with grippe and influenza seriously affecting distribution of the mails.

While Dr. Paul J. Jakmauh, State Public Health Commisioner, said conditions were greatly improved over a week ago in the state, the outbreak continued unabated in other sections of New England.

At East Hartford, Ct., United Aircraft Corp. officials said the plant's national defense output ultimately would be affected because more than 1250 of 15,000 workers were on the sick list.

In Boston, Supt. of Schools Arthur L. Gould reported the number of school absentees continued to show a drop.

Holy Cross College at Worcester, as a precautionary measure, cancelled all classes until next week, Westminster and Dracut were among the latest Bay State towns to close schools.

Thousands in South Stricken With Flu

ATLANTA, Jan. 15 (AP)—Tens of thousands of Southerners were abed today with a mild form of influenza and schools were closed in scores of rural communities.

Restrictions were placed on public gatherings in Spartanburg, S. C., where 15,000 cases were reported and in the Kingsport, Tenn., area some drugstores remained open 24 hours a day to fill prescriptions.

Governor Acts In Eaton Strike

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 15 (AP)—Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner called a conference in his executive office this afternoon to seek settlement of CIO union strikes in five plants of the Eaton Manufacturing Co., which is making airplane parts on national defense sub-contracts.

James F. Dewey, federal labor conciliator who has been attempting a settlement in conferences in Detroit; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), and a spokesman for the Eaton company's Wilcox-Rich division at Saginaw, Mich., will participate in the conference, Van Wagoner said.

Van Wagoner said he had received the assurance of Irvan Carey, president of the UAW-A. F. of L., which holds an exclusive bargaining contract at the Saginaw plant, that some 250 CIO members who were involved in a strike last November could be returned to their jobs a few at a time. The Governor added he was informed that more than 25 of them returned to work this morning.

Sham Battle Bullets Stir Probe at Fort Dix

FT DIX, N. J., Jan. 15 (AP)—Post authorities sought today to determine how deadly cartridges had been issued to members of the 71st Infantry, from New York, for a nighttime sham battle.

Brig. Gen. Ralph K. Robertson, acting 44th Division and Ft. Dix commander, revealed last night that he had found "guard cartridges" had been found in ammunition issued for a tactical problem the preceding evening. The ammunition was quickly recalled and the maneuvers proceeded without the firing of a shot.

"An investigation of the matter is being conducted," Robertson disclosed.

The guard cartridges, not used at Ft. Dix, are similar in appearance to a blank, but contain lead slugs in place of paper wadding to seal the charge. They are ordinarily issued to soldiers on sentry duty. Sentries here have blanks.

First Sergt. William P. Richey of Company B, a veteran of 25 years, detected the lead-tipped cartridges by their weight.

This is another in the series of letters from residents of war-torn Britain to friends and relatives in Greater Boston.

From: Aunt Audrey,
Wood Cottage,
Persandaworthal, Truro,
Cornwall, England.

To: Mr. and Mrs. Horace Bishop,
25 Woodbury St.,
S. Hamilton, Mass.

Dear Horace and Edna:

Just a few lines to wish you a very Happy Christmas and prosperous New Year. It will be a very ordinary time here, if we are living. Under the strenuous times we are existing, we have got to be very thankful that we have escaped likewise.

No doubt you would be surprised if you only knew how near bombs have fallen to us and shrapnel and pieces of the bombs' nose caps from the shells. I am very thankful so far we have all escaped injury. This past week we have had a terrific lot of gun fire take place, lit up with the flashes. Enough of war. We get it in the neck day in and day out now.

How is our little Carol? She looks very pretty in her snap. I bet she is interesting now. I have enclosed a pair gloves for her in the envelope. I think they are on the large size. I had quite a job to get them.

I can tell you things are beginning to get scarce and dear, but we must be very grateful to have enough to eat if it isn't the same as we had before.

If we stop to think of our brave merchant men and the fight they put up to get the food to our shores, we must not grumble. The last two or three days we have had some dry weather. For weeks before it didn't half rain and gales with it.

All here are pretty fit. Grandma has been wonderful again. Lately you should see her when the raids are on, no jittering about her I can tell you. I must ring off now, tea time creeping around, seven of us here every day to cook and dish out to, and I can tell you it takes some thinking out with the rations. This is wishing you all the best and a big hug for Carol and I should love to be able to take her in my arms and give her a big kiss.

You can wish us Good Luck home here for we sure need it. Love from Aunty Audrey.

P. S. We had cousins call to tea just now. Gordon and I took a walk back with them. After we had gone about one-half mile, Moaning Minnie went (raid warning). We had some walk. Machine gunning (Poms Poms) Flaming skies, the noise defeaning, but we reached home safe.

Jewish Women In Drive for War Kitchens

Pledged to give 15 rolling kitchens to Great Britain, the Greater Boston Women's Division of the American Jewish Congress will hold a workers' tea tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Peter Groper, Waverley ave., Newton.

This gathering will mark the launching of one of the most enthusiastic attempts to aid Britain yet staged in Boston and more than 300 outstanding Jewish women are scheduled to attend.

Miss Sarah Wambaugh, an international authority on plebiscite and foreign affairs, will speak. Other guests of honor will be Louis Calhern and Miss Dorothy Gish, now starring here in "Life With Father."

Mrs. Peter Groper is chairman of the British War Relief Committee. Co-chairmen of the project are Mrs. Simon Sampson and Mrs. Joseph Freidson. Mrs. Carl Lowe is president of the Greater Boston Women's Division.

Captains of the rolling kitchens project are Mrs. M. Seiden, Mrs. Murray Hurvitz, Mrs. A. Schackat, Mrs. Ella Frankfurter Rogers, sister of Justice Felix Frankfurter; Mrs. Maurice Rogers, Mrs. Gusele Cohen, Mrs. Charles Calish, Mrs. Louis Schwartz, Mrs. Frank Goldfarb.

Also: Mrs. A. Babbitt, Mrs. Philip Sagoff, Mrs. Joseph Freidson, Mrs. M. J. Rudnick, Mrs. Louis Romsey, Mrs. Edward Levine, Mrs. William Leitman, Mrs. George Barkin, Mrs. Harry Peck, Mrs. Max Braff and Mrs. Frank Small.

Mrs. Sadie Kalesky is chairman of the secretaries, who include Mrs. William Hirshberg, Mrs. Aaron Goldstein, Mrs. Louis Romsey, and Ella Frankfurter Rogers.

Treasurers are: Mrs. Peter Groper, general treasurer, and Mrs. Moses Gunsenheiser and Mrs. Hannah Gallant.

Cop's Shots Arouse 22 At Blaze

Employing something new in alarm technique, Patrolman Charles Hall fired three shots to rouse sleeping residents during a fire followed by an explosion in a Jamaicaaway apartment building today.

First to answer an alarm sounded by a passerby, the officer, accompanied by Patrolman Joseph Murphy, found the building dark and smoke youring through the hallway.

As the shots rang out, 22 occupants fled into the bitter cold, many in scant attire.

Carried to safety by the officers was Mrs. Simon J. Hogan, who with her family occupied quarters on the top floor of the three story brick building.

The blast came as escaping gas from a broken pipe filled the third floor and forced its way through the rear wall and toward the roof, shooting great bursts of flame.

Firemen were compelled to chop through from the roof to release the gas.

Among the occupants forced out were Mr. and Mrs. John Watson, Mrs. Clara Brown, Rev. and Mrs. Richard Beebe, Esther, Agatha and Joseph Hogan, Miss Emily Melaugh, Harry Bernstein, Harry Leavitt, Miss Phyllis Webber and J. Sidney Shepherd.

District Fire Chief Timothy Donovan estimated the damage at $10,000 and said the fire was caused by a short circuit due to defective wiring in a second floor apartment.

GARAGE BANDIT SOUGHT

Officers today sought an armed bandit who locked Max Cohen, gasoline attendant, in the basement of a taxicab company garage on Troy st., South End, and robbed him of $75. Cohen was imprisoned for 15 minutes before taxicab operators, hearing his cries, released him.

The commanding officer of the Gwin is Lt. Commdr. J. M. Huggins, U. S. N., and the executive officer, H. W. Taylor, U. S. N.

Educator Proposes Enforced Work Camps

Dr. Claude M. Fuess, headmaster of Phillips Academy, Andover, today was behind a proposal calling for national compulsory work camps to which all boys of 17 and 18 in the nation would be sent for six months or a year.

Only through such a system can the nation have a group of men equipped both for military service and democratic leadership, the prominent author and lecturer told the Women's Republican Club at a dinner in his honor.

BROOKLYN BLAZE TAKES 5 LIVES

Aerial Photographer Snaps Defense Plant Fire at Its Height

Inferno From the Sky—Made from a plane high above New York, photo shows the fiercely-blazing Brooklyn factory and lumber yard, in which six men were trapped and burned to death and ten others injured. The blaze started with an explosion in the plant of Bennett Bros., box manufacturers, where work was under way on more than $1,000,000 worth of defense contracts, and spread to an adjoining lumberyard.

3. Windmill—Feet still wide apart, stretch arms upward . . . then, bending from the waist, touch right finger to left toe and vice versa.

A RECOMMENDATION THAT the State legislature enact a law designed to curb those who make slanderous use of the radio during political campaigns has been made by the Massachusetts Judicial Council.

It should not only be acted upon favorably but it should not be so bound about with legal ties that it will fail to apply to slanderers other than those indulging in politics.

Opponents of the proposal are already whispering that it strikes at personal freedom of speech and is, therefore, censorship.

Such is not the case. It is far from the truth.

Newspapermen for many, many years have been guided in their writings by libel and slander laws.

THEY INVESTIGATE before they print; they insist fact replace hearsay and they respect the rights of unfortunate bystanders when handling stories of scandal.

This pattern has not been followed by radio speakers, despite the vigilance of radio stations, who deplore the use of the airwaves to vent personal spite and hate.

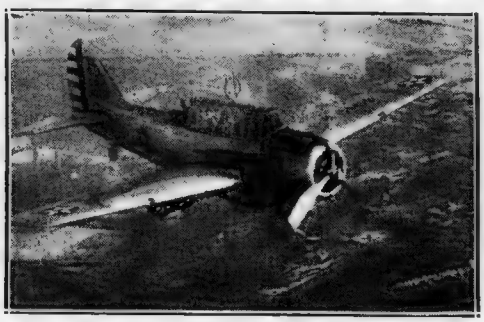
The answer is plain. Pass a law which will exact a strict penalty from the offender.

The fact the proposal is recommended by the Massachusetts Judicial Council is reason enough for immediate favorable action.

OUT OF THE welter of defense alarms and rearmament criticisms, it is good to hear news of preparations such as those of the 101st Observation Squadron reported by picture and printed word in Tuesday's Boston Evening American.

Reporter Joe Carter and Photographer Bill Jones provided us with more than a story.

They gave us an insight into actual training in aerial combat



DEFENSE WINGS OVER BOSTON
Point Way to Complete Preparedness

calculated to develop the finest fighting force to be sent aloft by any nation in the world.

But best of all, perhaps, is the assurance the maneuvers reported bring to Boston and New England.

For here are local units of the regular army undergoing rigorous, daily training to protect and guard our homes, our industry and our commerce.

Well we may say to ourselves that with men fit and ready, foreign aggressors will shun our shores, leaving us to the peace we so eternally desire.

WISELY DECIDING to expand the Boston Trade School, the Boston School Committee has requested funds to erect additional facilities.

Prompt and favorable action on the request by the authorities in Washington is to be expected for two sound reasons.

First it will make possible extension of fine training opportunities for ambitious and deserving youth.

One of the finest courses offered by the school is that in aviation mechanics, an indispensable adjunct of rearmament.

And second it will mean the creation of a timely supply of loyal American youth to serve in the sadly under-manned aviation service and manufacturing units so vital to adequate National Defense.

GOOD NEWS FOR the Massachusetts building industry and business in general is contained in the State Department of Labor and Industries survey showing a jump of 93 per cent in December building applications.

Actual value of the permits for the month was $5,375,355, a gain of $2,590,139 over December a year previous.

It may safely be accepted as a sign of the times, better times, that are in store for the State.

The long drouth in building is apparently ended. And with its ending a multitude of other lines from transportation to lumbering will be given a fillip.

OBSERVED C. H. SPURGEON: "Women are all saints abroad but ask their maids what they are at home." In Hollywood some women purposely hire maids who have worked for other women they know so as to get the inside information on their friends' home life. Said Bernard Shaw: "The more a man has travelled, the more experience he has had, the more likely he is to marry a country girl." And, you sir, is your wife from the rural districts? "There are 67 different ways a woman can like a man," claimed Alfred Sutro. I can only think of 46. "A woman dares all things when she loves or hates," said St. Jerome. You only have to read the newspapers to get a confirmation of that. Shakespeare claimed it was the man who was "to one thing constant never." "The great ambition of women, believe me, is to inspire love," said Moliere. How right the old boy was! A woman wants to love only one man but wants every male in the vicinity to be wild about her.

GLADYS SWARTHOUT, selected as the sixth best dressed woman in the country on list of 15 best, says her husband, Frank Chapman, selects her clothes. What a man! Last week my girl friend insisted I go with her and look at hats she was considering. "Now you select one and I'll take it," she said. I did. She took it. Two days later she took it back. Well, I didn't like the brown tweed suit she picked for me, either . . . A native of Pennsylvania has been selected to be the official hostess at the next Kentucky Derby. What, no more Blue Grass beauties? . . . Listen carefully to good, old Jim Thorpe, second greatest football player of all time. "Football teams today haven't a thing we didn't have 30 years ago. At Carlisle we used spinners, laterals, huddles, the T formation and the double wingback. We had one thing the colleges haven't today; that is 60 minute players. Modern collegians are trained to play six minutes at a time."

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—Monday afternoon we had a charming musical at the White House. Mr. Eugene List, the young pianist, made me feel that I would selfishly like to drop in some time when he was playing for his own pleasure, and ask him to run over many of the things which I like best and which I remember having had played to me when I was a child. Both of our artists yesterday were young. Mr. William Horne has a lovely voice and his program was delightfully chosen. Everyone to whom I spoke afterwards told me that they enjoyed the afternoon.

Mr. Maurice Davidson came in late for tea to tell me something more of the trip to Mexico with Vice-President-elect and Mrs. Wallace. I gather they all had a most successful time. Mr. Davidson is the president of the Society of American Friends of Mexico and has a special interest in the development of friendly relations between us and the Mexican government and people.

THESE DAYS before the inauguration are particularly trying for Mrs. Helm and Miss Thompson, who keep getting requests for seats, or for invitations to lunch or tea. We know quite well that seats cannot be expanded indefinitely and that, wonderful as the staff of the White House is, there comes a point where even the simplest lunch or tea cannot be served to any more people.

Rather sadly, Mrs. Helm said to me this morning:

"Don't you think we can say to anyone who hasn't answered yet that the lists are closed?"

I think she was rather discouraged when I explained that there would continue to be requests up to the last minute, some of which we would undoubtedly have to consider.

The weather is perfectly beautiful and we are all praying it will hold over inauguration day.

FORMER Governor O. Max Gardner, who is chairman of the Governor's reception committee, came to see me to invite the entire family to the reception which is being given for the governors by the inaugural committee at the residence of Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies. This should be a pleasant party, for it will not be too large. It is being kept entirely official in order that the governors may carry out their desire to talk to government officials on defense problems which have arisen in their respective states.

Many of us hope that attending the inauguration will be pleasanter this year for the governors of the states than it has ever been before. Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, who is chairman of the committee on music, has arranged a very interesting performance at Constitution Hall on Sunday night, where a very brilliant audience, including the governors and their wives, will be assembled.

GERTRUDE'S MALE LEAD IN DRAFT

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—WM. KNUDSEN: W. Averell Harriman, now an aide in the National Defense Council, will be elevated within a few days to a more important post in another department . . . NYA: Leopold Stokowski, who made a good-will tour of South America with your orchestra, has offered his full-time services to the President . . . GERTRUDE LAWRENCE: For eight years Victor Mature has tried to crash Broadway. After he became a Hollywood star, Mature relinquished his film salary to work in your new show, "Lady in the Dark," which promises to be such a hit. Those who have seen the tryouts insist that Mature performs admirably in this his first chance on Broadway. But today, three days before the premiere, he must report for a physical exam at his Draft Board.

LORD HALIFAX: An American who just has returned from Vichy is assuring his friends that there are two types of Frenchmen now, Anglophiles and Anglophobes . . . The French Anglophile says: "England always has been our friend and always will be. They tried to help us, but we were doomed. I certainly hope England wins" . . . The French Anglophobe says: "England double-crossed us. They let us do all the fighting. And at the crucial moment they showed their true colors by quitting us at Dunkirk. Those dirty soandsos. I certainly hope England wins."

H. C. HOPSON: Willard L. Thorp, trustee of your Associated Gas & Elec. Corp., returned from a tour of the company's Southern properties on Thursday. He was highly enthusiastic about the success of his dealing in behalf of A. G. & E. "Look, fellas," he reported to his colleagues, "I did a marvelous piece of business down South," and started handing out a roll of $20 bills—all Confederate . . . ED FLYNN: The White House staff is running a pool on the number of guests who will respond to the invitations for the Inaugural functions . . . ARTURO TOSCANINI: Justice Ferdinand Pecora was asked about the custom of rising when a jurist enters the courtroom. "What would you do if Toscanini came into your court room?" he was asked. "In that case," said Pecora, "I would rise."

ALFRED SLOAN: Knudsen, who likes to play poker, got into a game with some of his friends recently and lost. He went through his pockets, but could find no money with which to pay his losses . . . "Of course, of course," one of his friends stated. "How can you expect Bill Knudsen to pay his poker losses on the $1-a-year salary the Government pays him?" . . . "Just a minute. I've got it," Knudsen interrupted. "Here—take your money out of this and give me the change." He proffered his General Motors dividends check . . . of a few thousand dollars.

BILLY WILKERSON: Milton Berle, who went to Hollywood for "Tall, Dark and Handsome," met Joe Frisco there. Joe assured him that he no longer was wasting his time on horse races, but was concentrating all his thoughts on getting back to stardom. "Let's get together," Berle told him. "Where do you live?" . . . "I live," Fresco informed, "a mile and a furlong from Ciro's" . . . ERNEST HEMINGWAY: Your lawyer, Maurice Speiser, has succeeded in selling the Spanish and German rights to your anti-Fascist book, "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The German edition will be published in Stockholm.

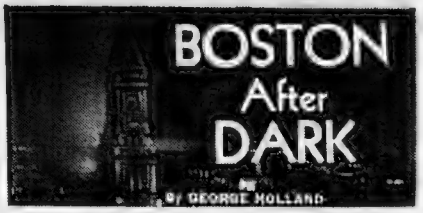
FASHION GUILD: A recent portrait of Eleanor Roosevelt shows the First Lady wearing an unusual drape of old lace around her shoulders. It was designed by a young Negro working on an NYA project who chanced to meet her. "I'm a fashion designer, but can't get any recognition," he told her, and asked for an opportunity. Mrs. Roosevelt thought of the lace resting in one of the storerooms and gave the young man the opportunity he needed . . . BILLY LEEDS: The U. S. Govt. has been photographing Turks Island in the British West Indies, your favorite fishing spot. A base probably will be erected there.



IN HIS TALK ON "SWING MUSIC as a Profession" at Boston University, Ruby Newman tossed a few roundhouses at what he called the "dance band managerial racket" . . . Chief among alleged "evils" mentioned by the Boston maestro was that of gobbling up thousands of hours of coast-to-coast radio time by the big booking organizations.

WITH SUCH AN IMPORTANT outlet for plugs almost monopolized, independent band leaders are induced to entrust their futures to the music "czars" who buy the radio time . . . The ASCAP-BMI battle has affected this angle somewhat . . . Many of the foremost musicians are continuing to decline to play on programs where their choice of repertory is limited to BMI numbers . . . And, at this time, that takes in all coast-to-coast airtime.

THE ONLY STATION in Massachusetts where ASCAP tunes are played exclusively at this stage of the "Battle of Music" is Charlie Phelan's WESX, in Salem . . . WMEX, under the aegis of Al Pote, offers listeners a variety of both ASCAP and BMI tunes . . . We are hearing less talk of "peace" on the jazz battlefront these days, and observers lean to the opinion that this indicates that peace actually is in the near offing.

THAT MARVELLOUS TRUMPET-PLAYING supposedly contributed by Fred Astaire in "Second Chorus" is the work of Bobby Hackett, the Boston trumpeter, who initiated jam sessions in Boston when the old Theatrical Club was the mecca of this section's stayer-uppers . . . This picture, incidentally, is far and away the most astute jazz picture yet released . . . Harry James and Boris Morros, whose background is very Bostonian, are credited.

BOSTON PLAYED HOST last summer to the clarinetist who now is regarded as potentially the greatest "legitimate man" . . . (i. e.: the barrelhouse clarinetist who would probably do a better job on the classics than Benny Goodman) . . . His name is Buster Bailey, and he was one of John Kirby's nonpareil unit at the Ritz Roof while Mrs. Kirby (Maxine Sullivan) was being featured here the past July . . . Bailey's tone is regarded by musicians as approaching ideal.

BELLE BAKER'S DEBUT at The Mayfair, harmed only slightly from the attendance standpoint because of the extreme cold, was all that was expected . . . Miss Baker's engagement is limited to a week . . . Our fair city still rates as a "one-week stand" in the cabaret circuit . . . Theatrical attractions find a paying public for as long as the twenty weeks indicated run which "Life With Father" undoubtedly will hang up . . . But the current crop of nightclub stars (including Joe E. Lewis, who is rated "tops") find audiences dwindling in the second week of an engagement.

WHILE SHE WAS IN BOSTON, Gertrude Lawrence miraculously squeezed in enough time between everlasting rehearsals (with their attendant elisions and changes in lines and business) to make an album—for Victor—of the songs from her play, "Lady In the Dark" . . . The New York premiere tomorrow night is the event of the season . . . Tickets are practically priceless.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT is playing the Gertrude Lawrence role in "Skylark" in pictures, and shooting is under way . . . The brilliant Gertie has no regrets . . .

FILMSTRESS CLAUDETTE COLBERT
Takes Gertie Lawrence's Role on Screen

Toward the end of the run of "Skylark" she was involved in a bitter fuss between those old friends, John Golden and Sam H. Harris . . . Golden insisted on her continuing her run until two weeks after November 15, when her contract expired . . . Mr. Harris demanded that she rehearse for "Lady In the Dark" on that date . . . Mr. H. won . . . But the mere mention of "Skylark" was causing Miss Lawrence to shudder in the waning weeks of the engagement.

WARNER WILL SPEND $1,200,000 ON FILM

By Louella O. Parsons

Cole Porter

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15 (INS)—If you don't believe that 1941 is to be a musical comedy year listen to this: Jack Warner will spend $1,200,000 on "Navy Blues," the first musical comedy that has come from Warners studio in four years. Personally I think Jack will have to spend even more with Cole Porter all hot set to write the sophisticated ditties. Cole doesn't work for peanuts and his stock has gone up since the success of "Panama Hattie." Then, too, I hear, entre nous, that Sam Woods, one of our best directors (who also gets a big salary) will direct.

Jack Haley was added to the cast of "Navy Blues" today. He will share the comedy spotlight with Eddie Albert and Jack Oakie. Haley reports at Warners after he finishes "Miami." He will have some real competition with Albert and Oakie, two lads who know their movie comedy.

MAX GORDON is disregarding all offers made him to sell the film rights to the New York stage hit, "My Sister, Eileen." He wants to produce it himself and he will form a producing unit of his own which will include Joe Fields and Jerry Chodorov, writers. Gordon would be very wise to align himself with one of the big companies with extensive releasing facilities and theaters if his picture is good at all and there is no reason why it shouldn't be, for he is an experienced producer of stage plays. Certainly a film sponsored by a top Hollywood company would be more successful for him than if it were made by a smaller concern.

LOUISE FAZENDA and Hal Wallis are journeying to Washington to attend the President's inaugural luncheon. And while in the East they will visit New York. Hal's purpose is to look over twelve unknowns who have been tested by Warners' New York office for "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "George Washington Slept Here." Warners believes, because of the value of these two stage properties, it is possible to cast them with unknown people who, because of the importance of the two pictures, would thereby have an auspicious introduction to the public.

HAL ROACH has invited me to take a look at Marjorie Woodworth, daughter of the city attorney of Inglewood and a young lady, he believes, will make a name for herself on the screen. Marjorie was born ten miles from the Roach studio in Culver City and has always had movie ambitions. A year ago Hal signed her on a contract and since that time she has been studying with dramatic teachers. Both Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Fred Astaire are enthusiastic over her possibilities. She will start playing leads, which may or may not be the right way to introduce a newcomer.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Burgess Meredith told me at the George Cukor cocktail party that Marlene Dietrich is so beautiful he wishes all the other women in the world looked like her. Probably Eric Remarque feels the same way, for I am told the emeralds he gave her for Christmas are something to see; Laird Cregar won a John Fredericks hat at the Mocambo Sweepstakes and it didn't make his wife a bit mad. Kay Sutton won the grand prize of a Trabert and Hoffer bracelet; John Warburton, the actor, became a grandfather today when his daughter, Norma Shepard, gave birth to a daughter at the Good Samaritan Hospital. Rudy Vallee, at long last, met Gene Tierney and celebrated the meeting by taking her to Charlie Foy's Supper Club; Mischa Auer's celebration of the Russian new year at the Scheherazade turned into a birthday party; Kay Francis, Mrs. Ralph Bellamy and Mrs. Frank Tuttle, all celebrating their natal days, were given cakes. So were Pat Morrison's parents, who were at the Russian new year with her because it was their 28th wedding anniversary; the Gary Coopers and a few friends saw "Meet John Doe" at a dinner party at the Frank Capras. Gary said it was the first time he could stand to look at himself on the screen; Claudette Colbert once again proved her prowess as a skier when she wrested honors from 200 other contestants at Sun Valley; Quentin Reynolds is due in Hollywood and you may be sure he will be bombarded with questions from all those who saw "London Can Take It";

Cooking

22 Ingredients Vital for Good Cakes

By MARTHA LEE

Time was when we thought cooks were born—that only those specially gifted could turn out cakes that melt in your mouth, muffins that were smooth and tender, biscuits that were flaky—and so on. We thought that many failures were expected before good results were obtained.

But today with controlled heat, good ingredients, excellent tested recipes, even the amateur can cook without waste of time or materials. The thing is to be sure that the ingredients are the best you can afford, and that you don't cut corners. Follow the instructions in the recipe to the letter, for too much or too little of any ingredient, or improper or poor technique in mixing will often result in an inferior product or even in failure.

Now in making a cake remember that there are two types—butter cakes and sponge cakes. Butter cakes are those which contain shortening, so named because butter was formerly the only shortening used in cake; sponge cakes are those which contain no shortening. They are given a spongy texture by a large proportion of egg.

MIXING CAKE

The method of mixing a cake influences the grain and texture. Too much mixing may produce a cracked, peaked, compact and tough cake; too little mixing may result in a course and uneven grain. A plain or simple cake may be mixed by hand by the muffin or quick method, while richer cakes require more thorough mixing. Mixing by machine is becoming more and more satisfactory as the mechanical mixer and its mixing technique have improved. Almost any cake recipe can be adapted to the mechanical mixer. Follow directions as given in the recipe, but cut the mixing time one-half or one-fourth the time indicated. For best results, follow the recipe directions that come with the mixer.

The shortening should not be too cold. It creams better if at room temperature. Eggs beat to greater volume when at room temperature than when fresh from the refrigerator. Milk, if too cold, may cause fat globules to separate out from the mixture. If ingredients are warm and the room is hot, the batter should be beaten a minimum amount.

BAKING CAKE

Pans should be prepared before the batter is mixed. Grease them and fill one-half to two-thirds full, pushing the batter into the corners to obtain a more level cake. Place the pans on a rack three or four inches from the bottom of the oven. They should not touch each other, and when several cakes are baked at one time and placed on two racks, the pans should be staggered so they do not come directly over one another.

A cake is done when it shrinks from the sides of the pan, springs back when touched lightly, or when a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean.

BASIC BUTTER CAKE

½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
2 cups sifted flour
2 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 cup milk
1 tsp. flavoring

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, creaming until light and fluffy. Add egg, beating thoroughly. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add to creamed mixture alternately with the milk; add flavoring, stirring only until smooth. Pour into greased loaf pan (8x8x2 inch), (or two 8-inch layers) and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 45 to 50 minutes for loaf; or 25 minutes at 375 deg. F. for layers.

SPONGE CAKE

4 eggs
¾ cup sugar
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup sifted flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1½ tsp. cornstarch
1 tsp. salt
¾ tsp lemon extract

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add sugar gradually and beat until smooth. Add water. Sift flour, baking powder, cornstarch and salt together and add gradually to first mixture. Add lemon extract and blend. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; fold in. Pour into 9-inch tube pan and bake in slow oven (325 deg. F.) 1 hour. Invert pan on wire cake rack until cool. Sprinkle with powdered sugar or spread with strawberry frosting.

You Can Be Beautiful

How To Erase Wrinkles!

By ARLINE GOULD

CALL THEM character lines instead of wrinkles, if you will . . . but admit that if you could have 'em out, you would! Every face has its distinctive expression lines . . you frown in a deep furrow between your eyebrows . . . you laugh in a spoke around your eyes . . . perhaps one side of your face has a deeper crease beside the mouth that comes from nervous tension. There's a way you can discipline . . . and even eventually erase these lines . . . and it's incredibly simple.

The idea came from Hollywood . . . via the make-up men . . . who discovered that lines may be ironed out by preventing the habitual tensing of certain muscles. And so these strangely shaped, wing-like bits of thin, still cloth treated with adhesive were invented.

Feminine and masculine stars took to them like mad . . . when they played or rested in the sun . . . these wing gadgets were on the "wrinkle spot" to prevent deepening of lines. And you'll find them just as amazingly useful.

Scientifically, cleverly shaped for a smoothing pull . . . the wings may be moistened slightly and affixed wherever you please. Perhaps you'd like to wear them as you work at home. Many stars use them at night . . . for when one sleeps, muscles in the face react the way they do when you're awake . . . you frown, wrinkle your brow and draw muscles together.

Wear a "wing" when you knit or read . . . so you won't be able to frown! They fit smoothly along the mouth, temple, eye or forehead line area. And a generous box costs only 25 cents . . . making it probably the most inexpensive treatment of its kind.

If you'd like further information on these wrinkle-smoothing "wings," phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days except Saturday, or write, care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture

Real Relief. Big Saving. So Easy. No Cooking.

This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective remedy for coughs due to colds. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a compound containing Norway Pine and palatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial membranes.

Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed.

Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of very effective and quick-acting cough remedy, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.

You'll be amazed by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving you delightful relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

AS DRAFTEES, reserve officers and National Guardsmen are being called into the service, one of Boston's greatest soldiers fighting in the cause of humanity, is once again answering the call of duty . . .

Mrs. Larz Anderson, perhaps Boston's most distinguished lady, who has devoted her whole life to spending her large fortune to help the poor and the unfortunate, is now completing plans to take an active part in assisting the Army in its great national defense work . .

Mrs. Anderson's career as a wealthy American heiress and wife of a great diplomat has been crowded with more worth-while accomplishments and thrilling story-book experiences than our space permits us to relate . . . She was Isabel Perkins, daughter of Anna Weld Perkins of Boston and Commodore George Hamilton Perkins, whose name is famous in U. S. naval annals . . He commanded one of Farragut's ships at Mobile Bay . . . During the last war she won the praise of nations and countless decorations for her services in establishing canteens at the front in France . . . Her medals include the Croix de Guerre, the American Red Cross Medal and the Japanese Order of Merit . . .

The late Mr. Anderson held a number of extremely important diplomatic posts, including those of Minister to Belgium (1911-12) and Ambassador to Japan (1912-13) . . . When not on diplomatic missions to the far corners of the world, or living at their Washington, D. C., residence, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson spent a great deal of time at "Weld" one of Brookline's show places . . . Weld has been the scene of as many parties for Boston newsboys, inmates of seamen's homes and other charitable institutions, as of state dinners, weddings, receptions and debutante parties for distinguished visitors or members of the family . . .

Plays, Operettas Produced Here

OF LATE YEARS Mrs. Anderson has entered the literary field by writing plays and stories for children . . . Her plays and operettas have been produced by local amateur theatrical groups on Boston stages or in the gardens at "Weld" . . .

Mrs. Anderson is at present staying at "Weld," where she was hostess recently at the wedding reception following the marriage of her cousin, Polly Gardiner, to Drayton Phillips, son of the U. S. Ambassador to Italy . . .

The end of January she and Mrs. Frederick Stone of Milton are departing for Texas, where they plan to begin their national defense activities by taking a house and providing entertainment and a bit of homelike atmosphere for the soldiers at Camp Hulen . . . Beyond this their plans are a bit indefinite . . . they will place themselves under the Army command so they don't know exactly what their orders will be.

Bridge Party Raises Funds for England

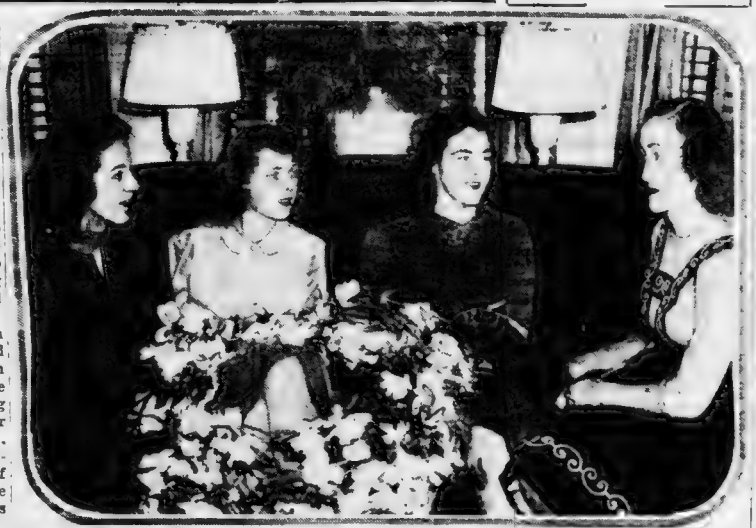
MRS. WILLARD BIGELOW and Mrs. Alexander Williams distinguished themselves by winning top scores in a ballroom full of expert bridge players yesterday afternoon at the big bridge party given to raise funds to provide a rolling kitchen for England . . .

The party was given at the Hotel Somerset, where Mrs. Rufus Sewall welcomed several hundred subscribers and announced that the affair netted enough funds to send a mobile canteen immediately to Cheltenham, where her sister is actively engaged in war work . . .

After the scores were counted and prizes awarded tea was served from flower-laden tables decorated with Easter and Calla lilies from Mrs. Edwin S. Webster's conservatories . . . Mrs. Webster attended the party and among the many other players were Mrs. J. Robinson Harding, who shared a table with Mrs. George Lewis and two other bridge fans; Mrs. Richard Pratt, who came up from Hingham to play with Mrs. George Glover Crocker, Jr.; Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake, Mrs. David H. Bangs of Nahant with her mother, Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Eleanor Garfield and Mrs. Phineas Sprague . . .

Others doing their bit for the worthy cause were Mrs. Davenport Brown, Mrs. Frank Shaw who attended with Mrs. Robert Treat Paine of Weston, Mrs. Arthur Grannis, Mrs. William R. Hedge, Rebekah Hobbs, and Eleanor Shaw.

Debbies Aid Gardenia Ball



EVERYBODY will be bedecked with gardenias on the night of Jan. 21st for these girls are getting their heads together to devise ways and means to sell bushels of them at the Gardenia Ball being given to benefit the Charlotte Cushman Club. These four members of the bevy of debutante flower vendors' committee are Ann Folsom, Isabel Foster, Ruth Brewer and Marjorie Ober.

Parties To Precede Club Ball

Much excitement is centered around the many cocktail and dinner parties to be held before the Gardenia Ball next Tuesday evening at the Copley Plaza. This sixth annual charity ball, held under the auspices of the Charlotte Cushman Club, will feature decorations of gardenias, a waltz contest, a buffet supper and a floor show put on by stage stars currently visiting Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Lang have invited a group of friends to a Stroganoff supper at their home in Wellesley Hills before coming to town to the dance. Miss Margaret Cass of Cambridge will entertain a merry crowd, including Sally deCoen, Rutherford Bingham, Anne Hiltz, Harry Clark, Alma deCoen and Martin Ryan.

Mr. and Mrs. John Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers Dow and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hincks will be among the dinner guests of Mr. E. Frank Leighton. Also among his guests will be Miss Martha Hastings, Mr. William Beal, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Winkler, Mrs. C. J. Baker and Mr. O. W. Nelson.

In Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rockwood's party will be Mr. and Mrs. Durham Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Myers and others. Post deb Cornelia Menard will entertain at a cocktail party for Irvin Remick, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Dupee, Jr., Elizabeth Wiley, George Robert Weppler and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bradon. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coburn of Chestnut Hill will also be hosts at a party before bringing their guests in town to the ball.

MEXICO HOLMES' TOPIC

"The Pageant of Mexico" is to be the subject of Burton Holmes' last Saturday afternoon lecture at Symphony Hall.

NUGENT DUE IN HUB PLAY

Elliott Nugent is known to the theatrical world as the triple-threat man of the theater. As star and co-author of "The Male Animal," comedy hit coming to the Wilbur Theater for two weeks beginning Monday, he will be seen in two of his capacities, that of actor and writer. The Bob Hope mystery picture, "The Cat and the Canary," was his most recent directorial effort in Hollywood.

The theater might be said to have been Nugent's first love, although he became one of Hollywood's great boosters during his 10 years' sojourn in the film capital. The son of J. C. Nugent, veteran actor and author, Elliott was literally born in the theater, making his theatrical debut at the age of four on the stage of the Orpheum Theater, Los Angeles.

Elliott Nugent

Starting as an actor in films Nugent rose to the directorial chair within two years.

Hepburn to Repeat in Boston

Good news to those who missed Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story," which had its premiere here last year, is the news that she is returning in the sensationally successful Philip Barry play for a single week's engagement at the Colonial Theater on Mon., Feb. 3.

As the title indicates, the plot of this gayest of plays involves life in and about the Quaker City

BRILLIANT BEHRMAN PLAY LACKS MOMENTUM

'The Talley Method' Hits Significant Note

By PEGGY DOYLE

S. N. Behrman and Ina Claire are always well met, but there came a time during last night's unveiling of "The Talley Method" at the Plymouth Theater when there seemed to be too much method and not enough momentum.

It may have been because Mr. Behrman felt called upon to have his characters say something significant, this being the time of our lives when that seems to be required playwrighting.

His fellow member of the Playwrights' Company, Elmer Rice, recently did it most successfully, we think, in "Flight to the West." That other famous playwrighter, Robert E. Sherwood, whose sense of timing in the theater is only equalled by Hitler's on a neutral frontier, accomplished it even more brilliantly in the year-old Broadway hit, "There Shall Be No Night."

TOP SOPHISTICATE

But Behrman's best when his characters are just being themselves—not indulging vocally in any significant shenanigans. Not to say that he didn't remind his audience every now and then that he is our foremost writer of sophisticated comedy.

There's nobody in the American theater who writes more gleaming dialogue or who knows better what makes the wheels go 'round in this so-called human race than this shy, reserved, happy-appearing fourth part of the brilliant, practical and eminently successful theater partnership known as the Playwrights' Company.

In "The Talley Method" he gets magnificent co-operation from Ina Claire, who is the country's ten best-dressed women for our money (Valentina adv.). Even when Miss Claire muffs a line, which she did more than once last night, she never even admits it to herself.

She is so expert an actress that if the floor caved in her warm, vital voice would doubtless float up from somewhere in the subcellar without interruption.

Last seen here in Behrman's "End of Summer" and before that in his more enthusiastically received "Biography," Miss Claire is presently playing the role of a noted poetess, Enid Fuller, whose romance with the famous surgeon, Dr. Axton Talley, played by Philip Merivale, involves her in more emotional cross currents than she thinks she can navigate at times.

HEADSTRONG DAUGHTER

There is the doctor's headstrong, young adopted daughter, Avis, (Anne Burr) a leader in the youth movement and in love with a visionary Austrian refugee twice her age. Philip, the son of the household, is a disappointment to his father because he refused to follow in his professional footsteps. What his father does not know but what Enid learns within a few moments' conversation is that the boy is infatuated with a Sybil something whom Avis' discouraged wooer describes as "a girl who neither smokes nor drinks, just strips—a poor man's Pavlowa."

This sotto voice individual, Cy Blodgett, is played by one of our favorite actors, the well-upholstered Hiram Sherman, who has a way of sneaking up on an audience and stealing the show in the quietest, most casual fashion.

John Abbott, who plays the refugee, also gives a nice performance but he involves things by falling in love with Miss Claire when it is Anne Burr who loves him. This makes Merivale so jealous he is practically inarticulate. And all of it, including Abbott's self-arranged demise and Merivale's Talley method of intolerant self-preoccupation which has provoked it, opens Miss Claire's lovely blue eyes to the impossibility of union with the distinguished medical man.

YOU will be seeing this striped centaurette and other figures, familiar and unfamiliar, in Walt Disney's "Fantasia" when it is given its local premiere within the next few weeks.

Fine Arts Feature

Best liked of all the Irish travel-talk films is "Here Is Ireland," which goes into its second week at the Fine Arts Theater today. Pat Stanton, of radio fame, is presenting this screen treat in natural colors

Jack Saef Honored For His Patriotism

In recognition of the patriotic activities he has made a regular Saturday afternoon feature on the children's program, Jack Saef, manager of Roxbury's Shawmut Theater, is to be honored Friday evening when Mayor Tobin and American Legion officials formally present him with a special Americanization award. Roxbury Post 44 has drawn up and is sponsoring the award.

Gish, Calhern Aid Community Drive

Dorothy Gish and Louis Calhern headliners of "Life With Father" at the Civic Repertory Theater, will make a unique contribution to the Greater Boston Community Fund Campaign this evening at 8 o'clock, when they broadcast over WAAB and the Colonial network, a sketch based on "Life With Father" angled to publicize the work of the Greater Boston Community Fund.

The Embassy Bomb

By Llewellyn Hughes

PATROLMAN GLEEN felt as though every bone in his body was broken. He was stretched on the ground, and they were standing over him in a circle. If only they would moisten his lips with water. But he couldn't expect any mercy from them.

They had caught him. In an effort to escape he had scaled the garden wall, dodged behind every available bit of cover, had run for miles through parks and across fields. They had shot him down, torn off his badge and flung it in his face, ripped off his uniform, stripping it from his limbs in rags, had trampled on it—and on him.

Patrolman Glynn knew he deserved it. Even now when they had taken their vengeance he was unable to look his fellow officers in the face. He had only a few moments to live and—if he could—he wanted to say something before he died.

"Don't make it too hard for—for Edith," he pleaded with them. "She'll suffer enough as it is. Don't tell her I lied to O'Neill just to save my skin. Tell her the explosion killed me, too. Don't let her know what I did.

"She thinks a lot of the O'Neills. She goes over there all the time to play with the kids. God! I don't know what came over me to do it. I couldn't see why the two of us had to go. I kept thinking of Edith—wondering what would become of her if I—if "

Patrolman Glenn didn't think they could hear him. He couldn't hear his own voice.

"It's tough for any girl being the wife of a cop on the bomb squad, and she hasn't been in such good health lately. Worrying that something might happen to me. We haven't been married very long, and we'd planned to go away on my vacation next week. It was to have been our honeymoon—the first chance we had to go away together.

"It was thinking of that made me do it, I guess. I told O'Neill the captain had said for him to go in there, while I kept the way clear for him. I told him the captain said he was to take the package to the far end of the embassy garden."

Patrolman Glenn could feel something being placed to his lips. Water! Now they had brought it to him it was impossible to swallow it, and when a little of it trickled down his throat the water had a strange sweetish taste. He tried to open his eyes. All he could see was a blurred expanse of blue sky, the tops of some trees.

Dimly he was aware of several people standing around him, most of them police officers. He bore them no ill will. Despite all they had done he clung to his feeling of companionship with them.

And then it was all very confusing to Patrolman Glenn. They were talking in hushed whispers and he seemed to hear them for the first time and, in the distance the clanging of an ambulance bell.

Then he was being lifted, slowly and gently, bringing on such insufferable pain that the blue sky turned into a blinding white, before everything—trees, whispering voices, shuffling feet—mercifully faded into oblivion. . . .

Patrolman Glenn was next aware of an odor of medication that was holding him down against his will. He said truculently:

"What's going on here?"

The answer was the touch of a cool hand on his forehead and the voice of a woman, speaking apparently to another person.

"He's coming out of it now."

"Astounding resistance. Heart as big as outdoors. Follow instructions, nurse, and he's every chance of pulling through. If his wife is still here, you might let her in for a moment."

Edith! Patrolman Glenn opened his eyes, but found only continued darkness, for his face was heavily bandaged.

"His wife left an hour ago, doctor, she waited until I begged her to get a little sleep. I think O'Neill is still here. He's been seated in the hall day and night."

"Let him come in."

There was the rustling of a woman's dress, the tiny click of a door, a short silence, an interchange of muffled words and the clearer voice of the nurse.

"He's been calling out your name, officer. He seemed to think that he'd brought about your death. He got the notion that he was ashamed to face any of his fellow officers—that he'd been running away, having violated his duty. We couldn't understand him. But he's more rational now."

"Jim."

That tremulous inquiry was uttered quite near him and Patrolman Glenn thought he recognized the voice.

"Fred?"

"Yes, Jim." Big Fred O'Neill seemed to be blubbering like a kid! "I've lived a thousand years for this moment. Jim—just to know that you—that things are going to be all right—"

"What is all this anyway?" Patrolman Glenn's eyes suddenly began to hurt him. His legs, his left arm and shoulder, were tied to a stake and the stake was on fire. "What happened?" he struggled. "There was a bomb—"

"It was pretty swell of you, Jim—what you did."

"I still don't get you, Fred."

"Telling me the captain said I was to stay outside the building—telling me I was to keep the way clear for you—"

Patrolman Glenn remembered it now! The instructions telephoned him by the captain. The terrific excitement at the Embassy. The meeting there with O'Neill. His thoughts of Edith. The vacation they had planned together. The temptation that had taken possession of him! That it was senseless for both men to risk their lives! Let O'Neill go in there! O'Neill with three growing kids.

Yes, it was clear to him now. He, Jim Glenn, had gone into the building alone, picked up the ticking suitcase, walked out with it to the far end of the garden, was putting it down when—

"It's the first time I ever heard of a man being promoted for disobeying orders." Patrolman O'Neill was trying, brokenly, to sound cheerful.

"Promoted?"

"You heard me, sergeant. The captain ordered both of us to go in there, only you—It was awful white of you, Jim."

"Hell!" The bandages on Jim Glenn's face concealed his attempted grin. "That's all I was thinking of feller. Looking for promotion. Hell, two ambassadors in the same Embassy never made sense, anyway."

THE END.

Be sure to read the intriguing story by Alissa Keiv on this page tomorrow.

The Principal Character in "The Embassy Bomb"

PATROLMAN GLENN, who endures mental as well as physical agony after being almost killed by the blast of a bomb secreted in the Embassy. In semi-delirium, he believes himself to have been a coward.

He was stretched on the ground, and they were standing over him in a circle.

City Workers Back F. D. Ball

"Members of the Municipal Employes' Assn are behind you 100 per cent in the fight against infantile paralysis," cried a telegram Mayor Maurice J. Tobin took with him to Washington when he is attending a meeting of the committee on fire prevention in connection with national defense.

Mayor Tobin was advised, as honorary chairman of the Birthday Ball at Boston Garden, Thursday night, Jan. 30, that city employes have never failed to purchase less than 5000 admission tickets.

While in Washington, Mayor Tobin will confer with national authorities on this annual charity to raise funds to fight infantile paralysis.

MONEY TO LOAN

"I needed $140"

"I NEEDED $140 pronto, but was afraid that a chanfeur like myself might not be able to get a loan for that much—or that the payments would be too big for me to handle.

"However, I got to talking with one of the fellows at the garage who had a loan at The Personal Finance Company. He told me* I probably could get the cash OK and that $9.41 a month would be all that I'd have to repay on $140.

"I stopped in a nearby Personal office that afternoon and got the loan without any trouble."

*More than two-thirds the people we serve come to us through the recommendation of our customers.

YOU GET CASH-plus WITH A LOAN FROM 'PERSONAL'

These "Pluses" have helped us become the largest loan company in Massachusetts:

LOAN SPECIALISTS—Because making personal loans of $20 to $300 is our full time business, we often are able to arrange loans that would be impossible elsewhere.

MINIMUM SECURITY—Most loans are made on no other security than your signature (husband and wife usually sign together).

PRIVACY—Our new Application Form asks only about your identity and your ability to meet the monthly payments. No revealing questions are asked of your employer, relatives or friends.

ECONOMY—You are not charged to endorse for a full length of time—a small pay only for the number of days you use the money.

CONSIDERATION—Personal will be glad if you pay more than halfway of any emergency loan ahead of time. But if you can't, we'll gladly extend your loan and work out a new loan plan.

PHONE FOR YOUR LOAN

If not convenient for you to come in, phone Hubbard 8507. Ask for Miss Hogan and say, "I want to get a loan." She will be pleased to take your application for a loan, and save you the necessity of applying in person at one of our offices.

SID MERCER SAYS:

Yankees' Housecleaning Most Sweeping Since '25

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—Most interesting baseball camp next spring will be the Yankee rendezvous at St. Petersburg.

More key spots will be available for absorption of new talent than at any time since Miller Huggins accomplished a rapid reconstruction job after the disastrous 1925 season.

JOE McCARTHY

There is a possibility of new tenants for every infield position.

Probably no manager has ever been reinforced with so many well seasoned young pitchers as Joe McCarthy will inspect next March. There are nine of them—eight from Yankee Double A clubs with a record of brilliant accomplishment in the two strongest minor leagues.

There will be some sentimental episodes as Yankee World Series heroes are displaced—relegated to minor roles or shipped to other clubs. The stars of old favorites are setting, and they will be dismissed when they depart, for they were great guys when they had it.

The St. Petersburg trials will be the first in 15 years in which there will be strong competition for several key positions. Youthful ambition will spur players who have toiled for several years to get into Yankee uniforms and bid for McCarthy's favor. Youth has scant regard for old-timers.

Ruth and Gehrig Ruled Two Decades

FOR THE LAST EIGHT YEARS observers have seen very few new Yankees step up and win regular jobs before the season opened. There has been a gradual change, to be sure, but still the baseball writers suffered from ennui in the spring. The Yankees assembled, picked up where they left off the previous October, and that was that.

Rarely were there more than five Yankee fledglings in camp, and most of them were back with the Newark Bears or Kansas City Blues before the Yanks departed from Florida.

From 1919 until 1935 there was Babe Ruth. From 1925 to 1940 there was Lou Gehrig. For 10 years they collaborated to personify Yankee power. For 20 years the Yanks had relied on one or the other or both to touch off their blasts.

Bill Dickey has been a fixture behind the bat for 12 years. Arndt Jorgens, who recently retired, was one of his understudies for 11 years. Charley Ruffing, in 10 full seasons with the Yanks, won 175 games and lost 102. Frankie Crosetti has been without competition at short for 10 years. Lefty Gomez rendered valiant service for the first nine of his 12 seasons as a Yankee and is striving for a comeback.

Red Rolfe is a seven-year Yankee. So is George Selkirk, Ruth's successor in right field. Joe DiMaggio is a five-term office holder at the Stadium and still going strong. Joe Gordon, like DiMaggio, came up with a spot made for him, slipped into it and made good from his start your years ago.

But the sands of time cannot be stayed.

Yanks May Unveil New Infield

RUTH GRADUALLY SLIPPED, and his parting from the Yankees was not a sudden or a heavy blow. But the club was unprepared for the rapid decline of Gehrig. However, the Yanks were still strong along that line from catcher to center field. The pitching stood up, and the first base and outfield tinkering was accomplished without disturbing team balance. What couldn't be offset was the natural wear and tear on the veterans.

There is talk that Joe Gordon may be shifted to third base or that Gerald Priddy, up from Kansas City, may be tried there. Phil

'TUSS' MAY HIRE POND TO COACH GREEN BACKS

GREEN'S GREETINGS. Coach Tuss McLaughry, appointed head mentor of the Dartmouth football team, meets Capt.-elect Charles "Stubby" Pearson in his visit to the Big Green. McLaughry succeeds Earl Blaik, who resigned Christmas Day to take over football coaching duties at West Point.

When McLaughry, who quit what probably was a lifetime berth at Brown University after 15 years' service, formally accepted Dartmouth's bid, he pointed out that his methods had much in common with Blaik's.

THREE-YEAR CONTRACT

"There will not be any radical changes," he promised. "I'll start with fundamentals during spring practice, and, when the squad masters them, it will be time to take up the intricate phases of the game.

"Earl Blaik's football and mine are very similar. About the only difference is that I favor the balanced line."

McLaughry, highly recommended to Dartmouth authorities by Blaik when the latter, along with all of his assistants, departed for West Point, is believed to have signed a three-year contract.

Only a few weeks ago, Brown attempted to re-engage him for another five-year term.

Among the candidates McLaughry will welcome here in a few weeks will be his youngest son, Bob, rated as the most promising of last season's freshman backs.

Another son, John, became one of the East's greatest blocking backs while playing under his father at Brown from 1937-39.

"I have heard many enthusiastic reports about Bob's football ability," 'Tuss' said, "but I never have seen him play."

It will be helpful for Dartmouth's new coach if Son Bob lives up to expectations, for his father has the unenviable task of assembling a new line as his first step.

SOPHOMORE NUCLEUS

The most impressive of Dartmouth's holdovers are now sophomores. McLaughry encountered similar material when he left Amherst for Brown back in 1926.

He managed to mould his famous "Ironmen," who went through nine victories and a tie without a single substitution, out of ten juniors and a senior.

During his last eight seasons at Brown, "Tuss" never had a really well-balanced squad, but he always managed to devise offenses that were deceptive enough to make them rank high with the East's best ground-gainers.

BULLETIN

HANOVER, N. H., Jan. 15—It was reported on good authority today that Raymond "Ducky" Pond, deposed head coach at Yale, was on his way here to confer with Tuss McLaughry. It was expected that McLaughry would offer the Dartmouth backfield coaching job to Pond. The latter was a great back in his undergraduate days at Yale, almost 20 years back.

Chambers on the Mend

Johnny Chambers, wing of the Boston University hockey team who was injured in a game with Boston College at the Arena last night, was today resting comfortably at Massachusetts Memorial Hospital.

All fears of a fractured skull was removed when X-ray photos showed Chambers to be suffering merely a slight concussion. He will be confined to the hospital for two or three days as a preventative measure.

Authorities at Boston University today called off the scheduled hockey invasion of Maine for the coming week-end, cancelling games with Colby on Friday and Bowdoin on Saturday because of grippe conditions in some of the Maine colleges. Bot hgames will probably be played during the Washington Birthday holidays.

$7500 'Excessive' For Elmira Ball Team

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 15 (AP)—The Elmira community group, negotiating for the Elmira Eastern League baseball franchise, has rejected as "excessive" the Brooklyn Dodgers' sale price of $7500.

The group, seeking outright purfugrther conferences between Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn club president, and Eastern League President Thomas H. Richardson who are negotiating the transfer.

An alternative plan by the Dodgers, who have decided not to operate the club after four years, also has been turned down by the group. This called for a working agreement between Brooklyn and the purchasers.

Boudreau Assures Peck Indians O. K.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 15 (AP)—When a manager tells a baseball player what's what, it isn't necessarily news—but when a baseball player tells a manager—

That's what happened at the Cleveland baseball writers' dinner last night honoring shortstop Lou Boudreau as the Cleveland Indians most valuable man on the field in 1940.

Boudreau turned to Roger Peckinpaugh, retired to general the Farm in place of Oscar Vitt, and said before the assembly:

"Statements are absolutely wrong, Rog, that it's tough to handle these (Indian) fellows. I want to say to you that you won't find a finer bunch of fellows anywhere.

"They'll give you all they have and you won't have to ask them twice. I can say that from my heart because I know these boys."

Boudreau accepted his honors with this comment:

"When you have somebody like Ray Mack (second baseman) on your left and Ken Keltner (third baseman) on your right—well, gee, fellows, it's just a breeze. The honors being passed around belong to them."

Peckinpaugh said, "much of our 1941 success hinges on whether (pitcher) Mel Harder and (outfielder) Jeff Heath come back. With them we are going to be mighty tough to beat. I'm sure that, with a few pats on the back, Heath will be good."

Carr Quits Soccer Post At Harvard

William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, announced today the resignation of John F. Carr, head coach of soccer at Harvard since 1929. Carr resigned due to the press of his law practice. No successor has been appointed.

In 12 seasons as head coach Carr's teams won 63 games, lost 22 and tied 19. In 13 Yale games two having been played with the Elis in 1932, his record is six victories, five defeats and two ties.

His best team was the 1938 outfit, which won eight games, tied one and lost none, and won the New England Intercollegiate title.

Chapman-Ferrier Golf Final Looms

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 15 (AP)—National Amateur Champion Dick Chapman and Jim Ferrier, Australian open titlist, moved closer to a clash today after easy opening victories in the Miami Biltmore amateur golf tournament.

Ferrier, the tournament medalist, turned back R. L. Stevens of Miami, 5 and 4, while Chapman was eliminating Ab Johnston of Miami, 7 and 5. In the round that reduced the top division to 16 players.

BROWN DUCKS FACE UNBEATEN HARVARD

The undefeated Harvard mermen will meet the strongest test of the season to date when they face Brown in the Crimson pool this evening at 8:45. The freshman teams will meet in a preliminary contest.

Paced by three outstanding swimmers, co-captains Bob Schnier and George Gibbons and Sopt Sherm Carter, the Bruins will be out to avenge their 42-33 setback of a year ago. Harvard, however will be a slight favorite because of its balance.

Harvard has defeated Tech, the Alumni, and Columbia this season. Capt. Franny Powers placed first in both the 100 and 220-yard free style races against the Lions.

Darcy Curwen, a soph and brother of a former Harvard star, stood out in the Columbia meet with a second to the Harvard leader in the 220 and a first in the quarter-mile event. He probably will be matched against Gibbons in these two races this evening.

Gibbons has been one of the outstanding swimmers in the history of the sport at the Providence institution.

Another close race is anticipated in the 200-yard breast stroke when J. A. Burgess of Brown faces Roy Wilcox and Max Kraus of the Crimson.

The return to action of veteran Art Bosworth, who has been out of action so far this season, is expected to give Harvard the edge in the dorsal event inasmuch as Bill Drucker, who placed first against Columbia will also be in the back stroke event.

Other Harvard entries include Shaw McCutcheon and Bill Patterson in the dive, veterans Tony Stowell, Dave Stearns and Ed McNitt in the free style and relay events.

Armstrong's Eyes Given O. K. By 3 Doctors

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (INS)—Exploding reports to the contrary, Henry Armstrong's eyes were reported normal today by three physicians who put him through a rigid examination for the State Boxing Commission in preparation for his 15-round title bout with Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic Friday night.

Zivic also was examined and pronounced in perfect physical shape for the Madison Square Garden tangle with the former three-time champ.

Zivic and Armstrong signed contracts and posted the usual $1500 forfeits. Zivic's weight was given as 149 and Armstrong's as 142½. Armstrong is a 9-to-5 favorite in the early betting to regain his welter crown from Zivic.

SPORT-O-GRIMES

When the Bees go to San Antonio next month, they'll be the first Boston club to set up a spring training camp West of the Mississippi in 17 years. The Red Sox, when they were owned by Bob Quinn trained at San Antonio in the spring of 1924.

Jack Onslow, manager of the Hartford Bees, predicts that Jim Hickey, the giant right hand pitcher from No. Abington, will be one of his winning hurlers this season. Handsome Jack also expects much of Al Robeige, the Lowell boy, who played second base for Bob Coleman at Evansville Ind., last year. Robeige is one of the most promising young infielders in the country. Bob Quinn will leave for New York tomorrow. Son John will attend the Pony League meeting next week.

Dartmouth couldn't have made a better selection than D'Ormond "Tuss" McLaughry. The former Brown football mentor is fully qualified to handle any gridiron set up, and he should keep the Big Green well up in the Ivy League. During the 15 years he was in charge of football at Brown University, McLaughry made a very creditable showing, despite the fact that he never had an over-abundance of material.

• • •

One of Tuss' aces in the hole at Dartmouth for the next three years will be his younger son, Bob. Tuss had his son John at Brown for three seasons. According to no less an authority than Earl Blaik, Bob McLaughry is the best looking freshman back that ever competed against the Big Green varsity during his (Blaik's) seven years at Hanover.

Will "Pat" Hanley remain at Boston University? Or will he go to Quantico as head coach of the U. S. Marine Corps? He's a Major in the Marine Corps and is well qualified to handle the Leather Necks' football situation.

• • •

When Ohio State, the nation's fifth largest college, loses its high school coach to succeed Francis A. Schmidt at a salary of $6500, the Columbus O. institution of learning must be de-emphasizing football.

6 Cubs Fall Into Line

CHICAGO, Jan. 15 (AP) The Chicago Cubs received six more signed contracts today including that of Lt. Al Todd whose No. 1 catching job will be sought by four youngsters in spring training.

The other five signers are Catcher Bob Collins, Bob Schaffing, Pitchers Vance Page and Ken Raffensberger, and Outfielder Barney Olsen. Schaffing and Olsen are newcomers.

The White Sox yesterday added the autographed contracts of Pitcher Joe Haynes, recently purchased from Washington on a trial basis, and rookie pitcher, Warren Martin.

The club needs only the signed contracts of Pete Appleton, and Clint Brown, pitchers, and Outfielder Larry Rosenthal to complete its squad of 34.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15 (AP) The Athletics had signed contracts today from two of their most promising hurlers.

Manager Connie Mack said both Porter Vaughan, former University of Richmond, Va., southpaw, and Rankin Johnson, Jr., had returned their 1941 agreements. Vaughan, for whom great things were predicted a year ago, won only two games and lost eight. Johnson, a big right hander, was with the Midland team in the East Texas League.

Browns Lost Money After Biggest Year

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 14 (AP)—While 1940 was the best in recent years from the point of attendance receipts, stockholders of the St. Louis Browns were told today the season's income was insufficient to meet the team's operating expenses.

President Donald L. Barnes reported at the annual meeting that the outlook for the coming campaign, however, was "most encouraging."

He promised that the management would "vigorously" pursue its policy of acquiring additional playing strength and would continue the development of its farm system.

Pitching Situation Yankee Problem

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (AP)—Despite what the loss of the world championship has done toward overhauling and taking the carbon knocks out of Joe McCarthy's digestive system, the manager of the Yankees is planning deliberately to drive his boys back to the top in 1941.

This can mean only that McCarthy is a slave to duty. Ordinarily at this time of year Joe's eyes have a slightly glazed look and his breath comes in gasps after having spent a couple of months on the "banquet circuit," tearing through the rubber chicken and the hip steaks.

PITCHERS ONLY WORRY

"Last year was just one of those things," Joe said sunnily, clasping his hands across a stomach that didn't register an ache or a pain. "The breaks went against us all the way."

Joe said the only worry he would have when the Yanks pitch camp at St. Pitersburg next month would be his pitching. Otherwise he figures the club has an abundance of fine material.

He hasn't fully decided how he will use the sensational young second base combination of Phil Rizzuto and Gerald Priddy from Kansas City.

"My first inclination is to keep a pair like that together," he mused. "Still, I have a mighty fine second baseman in Joe Gordon, and it's good to have a man like him in there to steady a youngster like Rizzuto. . . . I might shift Gordon to third. But shucks, why worry about that now? Rizzuto has to show me he can play shortstop better than Frankie Crosetti, and how can you count a guy like Red Rolfe out at third? We'll see."

FEARS CLEVELAND

In the meantime, Joe is inclined to think Cleveland will be a little tougher to beat than Detroit over the long haul in the coming campaign.

"I think the Indians have helped themselves some with their trades. They are young, will stand up over the route and overpower the weaker clubs. Especially when that kid, Feller, is pitching."

New Buckeye Coach to Run Football Show

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 15 (INS)—Hailed as the "miracle man" who will return Ohio State University to the football green pastures, Paul "Bucky" Brown, new Buckeye coach, today studied the problem of assistants at the $8000 post to which he was named yesterday.

Brown declined to comment, but observers believe he will draft at least one of his assistants at Massillon, O., high school, whose football teams have won 33 straight games and lost but one in the last 60 played. Hugh G. McGrannahan, former coach at Wayne University in Detroit and a Massillon assistant, is heavily favored to follow Brown to Ohio State.

In a press conference—the first at Ohio State for years—Brown made it definite that "I am running the show."

"I've coached at Massillon, and I think successfully, on the theory of merit and right and wrong," he emphasized. "There is no reason to believe that those same theories will not work at Ohio State."

Brown was hired under a "gentleman's agreement" for three years. He is expected to assume his duties about March 1.

WINGS 3, RANGERS 3

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (INS) — The crippled Detroit Red Wings played the New York Rangers to a 3-3 tie here. The overtime standoff was a moral victory for the invaders who have yet to lose a game this season to the Rangers.

Lion Natators Break Records—With Rubber Fins

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—Columbia University's swimmers, who have lost three meets so far this season, have been smashing all sorts of free style and backstroke records in practice—but their feats are illegal, as well as unofficial.

Joe McKinley recently swam 50 yards in 22 seconds flat, eight tenths of a second better than the intercollegiate free style record, and Jack Brown did 50 yards backstroke under 23 seconds. Both these performances were made with the aid of rubber fins, which Coach Ed Kennedy fits around the legs of the swimmers to develop their muscles for kicking.

"They merely increase the surface of a boy's foot," Kennedy explained, "and with them an average swimmer can better any existing mark, using the regular free style or backstroke kick."

John Woodruff Has New Title: "Second Louie"

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—John Woodruff, the long, tall Negro runner from the University of Pittsburgh who won the 800-meter event in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin, is a brand new second lieutenant in the 369th Coast Artillery, a local anti-aircraft regiment.

John withdrew last month from New York University, where he was working for a master's degree, to devote his time to the regiment. Two days ago his outfit was inducted into the regular army, and Woodruff was one of 15 second lieutenants commissioned.

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I HAVE WRITTEN the following letter to Al Bine, boxing editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, who is of the opinion the Pacific Coast amateur boxing team will sweep all before it in the grand national finals of the All-America diamond belt championships at the Garden on January 27.

LARRY PACINO

"I am ready to admit, Al, that California is sending the finest team of amateur boxers to Boston for the All-America finals that ever represented your orange groves and rolling mountains, but this won't keep them from getting defeated.

"Your boys will have to be pretty good to stop the surge of the Eastern team, while I understand the Mid-West will also be represented by an outfit which will cover itself with glory. At the grand nationals in San Francisco last January, the Mid-West team won four titles.

"I shall stand with the East in the coming tournament. I was interested in your statements about Escalona, the Mexican flyweight. These Mexican flyweights have always looked impressive when they have shown in Boston in the past, and I'll grant that Escalona rates with the best men to ever represent the Coast in the flyweight class in an amateur tournament.

"The winner in this class in my opinion will be Diogenes Leon of New York by way of Puerto Rico. Leon was the sensation of the All-Eastern finals. This youngster tosses as many punches as snowflakes fall during a winter storm on Mount Washington. Leon is as fast as lightning, and shapes up as one of the most finished simon pure boxers in the country.

"Your 118-pounder had better be good as the East is represented by Orlando Fanti of Lynn. Fanti has been improving with each start, and looks as if he is going places as a bantamweight. He won't bow to the West Coast or to the Mid-West. He'll be there a week from Monday night to win by an impressive margin."

"IN THE LIGHTWEIGHT class, the East will look to New York to give it a winner. William Moore of New York will be our standard bearer in this division. Moore is a stiff puncher, and boxes well.

"Max Kase, sports editor of the New York Journal-American, and Paul Gardner, boxing editor, tell me Moore has been showing top form in training and that he is looking forward to scoring a victory in the Garden.

"New England has always produced first class welterweights. In the professional ring, Eddie Shevlin, Paul Doyle, Young Kloby, Nate Siegal, Paddy Flynn, George (Kid) Lee, Lou Brouillard and Al Mello showed to advantage. Most of these boxers were graduates of the amateurs. Now Dave Andrews from Lowell represents the East in the 147-pound class.

"Andrews has improved with each start. He is an aggressive, two-fisted scrapper and fights his best when hard-pressed. He won't be awed by the representatives of California or the Mid-West and is confident he will win.

"Larry Pacino of Roxbury, the East's representative in the middleweight class, is my idea of one of the best amateurs in the country. Pacino has a perfect physical build, is always in good condition, is a fine ring general and a good boxer, and a devastating hitter. Once Larry hurts an opponent he goes to town behind a blazing attack of left and right hand punches.

"Pacino recently made a trip to New York to see the big time fighters in action under the lights in the ring at Madison Square Garden. While Larry will remain an amateur for the remainder of the indoor season, by next Summer he is likely to join the ranks of the money chasers. He is a cinch to make good. The boy has what it takes.

"IN THE LIGHT heavyweight class, I'm going to wager a hat on Tommy Sullivan of South Boston. Tommy is a distant relative of John L. Sullivan, the famous Boston 'Strong Boy.' John L. is Tommy's idol, and you may look to see the South Boston youngster firing away with both hands against the best the Coast and the Mid-West have to offer.

"Harry Kelley, a pal of Tommy Farmer and Johnny Rogers, was Sullivan's original trainer. Harry says that when Sullivan opens up with both dukes he is a pretty hard man to beat. Tommy is able to take a punch as well as give one. A Sullivan, Al, is always a good bet when the going gets a little rough.

"New York will once more try to win the heavyweight class for the East. Earl Lowman, a colored heavyweight from New York, blazed through the Eastern finals. He is a big, powerful fellow.

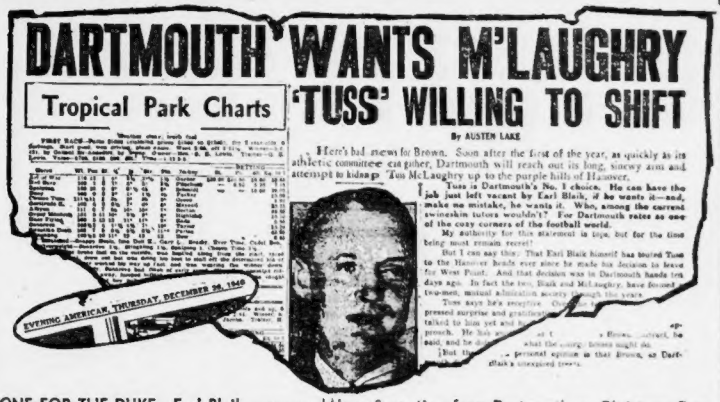
"I would like to see your Connie Norden, whom you say is a longshoreman, collide with Lowman in the final. If Norden hits as hard in the nationals as he did in the Coast finals, there should be terrific action as Lowman is also a good belter.

"Give my best wishes to Art Martell, and tell him he will have to have his Pacific Coast team in excellent condition if it is to fare well against the stars of the East."

Another Scoop for Boston American

DARTMOUTH WANTS M'LAUGHRY
Tropical Park Charts 'TUSS' WILLING TO SHIFT

By AUSTEN LAKE



Here's bad news for Brown. Soon after the first of the year, as quickly as its athletic committee can gather, Dartmouth will reach out its long, sinewy arms and attempt to kidnap Tuss McLaughry up to the purple hills of Hanover.

Tuss is Dartmouth's No. 1 choice. He can have the job just left vacant by Earl Blaik, if he wants it—and, make no mistake, he wants it. Who, among the current swineskin tutors wouldn't? For Dartmouth rates as one of the cozy corners of the football world.

My authority for this statement is top, but for the time being must remain secret!

But I can say this: That Earl Blaik himself has touted Tuss to the Hanover heads ever since he made his decision to leave for West Point. And that decision was in Dartmouth hands ten days ago. In fact the two, Blaik and McLaughry, have formed [illegible] mutual admiration society [illegible] this year.

Tuss says he's receptive. Our [illegible] appeared surprise and gratification [illegible] talked to him yet and [illegible] approach. He has [illegible] what the outcry, [illegible] might do.

But [illegible] personal opinion is that Brown, as Dartmouth's unexpired term.

ONE FOR THE DUKE. Earl Blaik announced his resignation from Dartmouth on Christmas Day. The Boston Evening American did not publish that day but the very next morning Austen "Duke" Lake had the story that Dartmouth wanted Tuss McLaughry and that Tuss wanted the job. Read it above, dated Dec. 26, and see how correct Lake's forecast was. And read the American every day for up-to-the-minute news.

13-Year-Old Out to Enhance Family Name

Paul A. Dannahy of West Roxbury is the youngest member of a family long famous for winning New England speed skating titles. Now Paul, aged 13, aspires to carry on the family tradition by engaging in his very first competition on the occasion of the sixth annual Silver Skates Derby.

When the juvenile field toes the starting mark in the big Boston Garden classic on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 16, young Paul will be there, alert to the opportunity of reliving the competitive careers of Daddy Royal A. Dannahy and Uncles Frank and Dan.

Here's Paul's interesting letter accompanying his entry blank:

"My father is an ex-skating champion and one of the famous Dannahy family from Dorcester. He won the boys' race at the Boston Arena in the 1912 carnival run by the Boston American. He still treasures that medal. He was also New England intercollegiate speed skating champion.

"My uncles, Frank and Dan, were good skaters. Uncle Frank won the medal which was the special prize for the five-mile Boston American race in the 1912 Arena championships.

"I have always liked skating but have never before been in competition because of my age. But now I hope to follow in the footsteps of my father and uncles."

Welcome, Paul. And may you meet with just as much good fortune as your famous family.

CALIFORNIA SENDS EIGHT STANDOUTS TO ALL-AMERICAS

By WALTER KILEY

Within a very few days now, what is said to be the finest group of amateur boxers ever assembled in California will meet in Los Angeles and immediately head cross-country for Boston.

Californians who are a bit given to boasting about everything they produce are more boastful than ever about these California All-America champions who will fight the strong teams of the East and Mid-West in the National All-America title tournament to be held at Boston Garden on Monday, Jan. 27.

Actually the invaders from the opposite side of the continent are members of the Pacific Coast All-America team. But it happens that the Californians proved so outstanding in the several title competitions held out there that not one outsider won his way through the finals.

Ordinarily Seattle, Washington, and Portland, Oregon, come up with powerful simon-pure talent. But all the many other Pacific Coast states fell by the wayside this year, ground under by the punching fury of the eight cocky Californians.

Four of the octet call San Francisco home. Two others hail from Los Angeles and one each from Mexicala and Bakersfield.

Trainer Art Martell, who accompanies them, is anxious that they have ample time to acclimate themselves to local conditions.

Martell, who is rated top fight expert in Coast regions, brought on the California team to Boston three years ago, which not only came up with sensational ring performances but which carried home a big portion of the national titles.

ESCALONA A MEXICAN

Martell advises us that the 1941 Californian team is the best he has ever handled.

"We're strong in every one of the eight classes," he writes. We had the most successful tournament in history, with more and better fighters than ever before. Our qualifiers for the Boston trip had to win on merit," he continues.

"Our flyweight is Gregorio Escalona, the only Mexican on the team, a terrific puncher and a clever boxer who is better than anything we have around in professional ranks. But we'll never find out just how well the kid might do against the pros because he has a job as a fireman in Mexicala, and he's perfectly satisfied with his future.

"Al Medrana is our bantamweight. He's a Los Angeles schoolboy who had to get special permission to make the trip. Boxing less than a year, he's a regular whirlwind. We look for great things from him.

"Paddy Jacklich, San Francisco featherweight, is said to be the finest amateur boxer ever developed in the Bay region and his performances in our eliminations made the statement ring true.

I never saw a harder puncher for his weight. He knocked out all but one of 12 foes he met in the San Francisco and Pacific Coast championships.

"I'll write you about the heavier boys later. They're good, too.

"Just tell your New England fight fans we've got a swell team, and we won't be content with anything but the lion's share of the championship prizes."

International News Photo

"I'LL GET UP"—Jimmy Delgadillo, San Francisco bantamweight, goes down before Al Medrano of Los Angeles in first round of Pacific Coast All-Americas. But Jimmy got up and floored Medrano in second round. That was the end of his surge, however, for Medrano won going away after that. Medrano is one of several Far West champions who will be seen in national All-America finals at Boston Garden, Jan. 27.

Kaplan, Denner Win N. Y. Bouts

NEW YORK, Jan. 15 (AP)—Mike Kaplan, clever Boston welterweight, outpointed Tony Ferrara of Mount Vernon, N. Y., in a hard-fought eight-round bout at the Coliseum.

Ferrara, a willing mixer, could not Match Kaplan at boxing and after the fourth round the Bostonian held a big lead.

There were no knockdowns, although Ferrara slipped to the canvas in the second. Kaplan weighed 146. Ferrara 146¾.

Abe Denner, 125¾, Boston, scored a technical knockout over John "Mel" Williams, 134½, New York, in 1:19 of the first round of another eight-rounder.

No Price Hike For All-Americas

There is no advance in prices for the National All-America amateur boxing championships to be held at Boston Garden, Monday, January 27.

The tournament brings together the sectional All-America title teams of the East, Mid-West and California.

Salamone Fans Kept Apart From Bartolo's

A collegiate football touch will be noted next Wednesday night at the Boston Garden when Salvatore Bartola, East Boston, and George Salamone, East Boston, clash in a 10-round neighborhood fight in the highlight of the Hub's first 1941 professional boxing show.

Aware of the bitterness between the Bartolo backers and the Salamone supporters, Rip Valenti, matchmaker of the Goodwin A. C., has decided to keep the rival cheering sections segregated—to avoid any unscheduled boxing exhibitions outside the ropes.

Valenti is assigning one side of the Garden to the Bartolo backers; the opposite to the Salamone supporters with the neutral observers and the ring as a dividing line. Thus the yell sections will be confined to private quarters.

Salamone and Bartolo, both confident of victory, have agreed to fight on a winner-take-all basis.

Their purses will be pooled and the victor will take the entire bundle. The loser will get nothing

SID MERCER SAYS:

Rizzuto is coming up from the same team to displace Crosetti. Kansas City also furnishes a first baseman, Johnny Sturm, who will challenge Babe Dahlgren.

It is conceivable, though unlikely, that the Yanks can take the field next April with a complete new inner line of defense. That would be Sturm at first base, Priddy at second, Rizzuto at short and Gordon at third.

The pitching turnover is likely to be astounding. Two veterans are off the roster already, and another may follow before long. With Ruffing probably working not more than once a week, and Gomez a doubtful asset, there may be room for five of the nine newcomers. No club has ever absorbed so large a unit of young pitchers at one time.

The nine young flingers are all right-handers, and eight of them come direct from the Newark and Kansas City Double A Yankee farms. The ninth is Rinaldo Ardizol, who won 15 but lost 20 for the weak Hollywood second division club in the Pacific Coast League. Ardizol, nevertheless, is regarded as one of the brightest prospects, for he has tremendous speed, and in 45 games last season struck out 147 batters.

Talented Rookie Group

THE 1940 RECORDS of nine youngsters coming directly from Newark and Kansas City combine for a winning percentage of .700. All were full time performers except Allan Gettel, who won four and lost three for Newark. The Newark group turned in 13 shutouts and the Kansas City trio 11.

They were with good teams, of course, but they also figure to get strong support from the Yankees. Following are the records of the nine young candidates:

SKI SCRIBBLINGS
BY "TAP" GOODENOUGH

THE PINE TREE STATE IS ON SKIS!

Slow to start, the skiing snowball is now rolling at top speed in every section of Maine! . . . Trails and slopes which for years had remained vast expanses of empty white are now embroidered with criss-cross patterns of ski tracks, stippled by Christies and Sitzmarks . . .

New slopes and runs are being cut like ribbons through the mountain forests . . . And not only the visitors to Maine, but all the natives are decidedly ski-conscious, as that delightful "Down East" dialect embraces such terms as "stem Christianias" and "schussing" . . . Even the animals may take up the sport, bears chasing hunters on skis! . . .

To illustrate how keen interest is in skiing, President Harold H. Sampson of the Maine Winter Sports Federation tells us about a 10-year-old Bridgton lad living in the vicinity of Pleasant Mountain. Not having the necessary funds to provide the boy with his desired ski equipment, his father gave him a small pig to raise during the summer. The young porker thrived and was sold at a good sum this past fall, with the result that the youthful ski enthusiast now has his complete outfit! . . .

SCOUTING SKI SPOTS

One of the nicest places at which we have ever stayed is Christmas Tree Inn at Bridgton, ably run by Mrs. Emma B. Kanaly . . . A water color come to life amidst the pines, mirrored in beautiful Highland Lake, this inn offers everything for those wanting fun and vigorous exercise, or rest and relaxation.

Its inviting exterior is that of a rustic log cabin, while the entire interior is done in maple. Each room overlooks a balcony, below which is a huge living room, flames singing songs of winter in the fireplace, as guests dance, talk or play games. This year the kitchen has been enlarged and there is a waxing room in the cellar. And the food is still exceptional! Skating, tobogganing, curling and all sports abound here . . .

The ski center in Bridgton is at the Pleasant Mountain development . . . Novice and expert alike find terrain here for their ability. Two tows service the open slopes, one lift being 1100 feet in length, the other for beginners. The Waysho Trail, one mile long from a 2000 foot altitude, is used as a Class C racing trail. Weekly informal and sanctioned downhill and slalom races are held to promote the sport.

A warming hut, under the genial direction of Jack Spratt, provides food and equipment. And Jack is a real enthusiast and skier, organizing activities . . .

Striving for safety, a trained Ski Patrol guards the slopes. These lads help to curb recklessness, protect the novice skiers, and aid children. They are doing great work! . . .

There is also a 20 meter ski jump on the hill. This site will be the scene of the Maine Intercollegiate Ski Meet on February 7-8 among Bates, Bowdoin, Colby and University of Maine . . .

Skiing conditions on Pleasant Mountain are good at this writing . . . More than 1000 skiers stormed the heights last Sunday . . .

Jumping over to Camden, we talk with Betty Foxwell of the Outing Club, who gives us news for the lads looking for new trails to conquer . . . On the eastern slope of Mt. Megunticook (second highest peak on the entire Atlantic coast of the U. S.) is the Megunticook Ski Trail, laid out by Gordon Langille, government expert. The newly completed northern branch, with a 70 degree maximum grade, rates as expert. The southern branch is intermediate. Both branches are from 30 to 60 feet wide, with a vertical descent of 1000 feet in a mile, and are hand graded and seeded so that only a few inches of snow are needed for use . . . "Track!"

The Camden Snow Bowl is the big development in this area, attracting hundreds every week-end. A 1200 foot tow runs day and night, the slopes having lights . . .

A new 10-meter ski jump will be finished shortly near the slope at this Snow Bowl. Sanctioned by the U. S. E. A. S. A., a meet will be run here on February 15 and 16, comprising all events . . .

Mushing through Maine, we halted again at Rumford, a lively community . . . This ski center boasts the only cable tow in the state. Cross-country skiing is encouraged in this country, many trails being laid out for lovers of langlaufing. The open slopes are in good shape, with a skating rink nearby. A ski shack permeates hospitality and warmth for all . . .

The Chisholm Skiing and Outing Club of Rumford has two of the few Class A jumpers in New England on its membership list, Aurele Legere and Andy Mooney holding that rating. Legere is the present state of Maine champion . . . This club is a "ski hive" of activity . . .

SKI CLUB SCHUSSES

Back at Bridgton again, we scout the Pleasant Mt. Ski Club and learn that this outfit has nearly 200 members! . . . The club has been giving a lot of proficiency tests this year. About 50 skiers have taken these tests so far, with some 30 passing. Wes Marco and Wendel Whitten have conducted the ratings. A slow stem turn under perfect control seems to have stopped many. No one tries the optional Telemark turn in preference to the pole jump turns, Ray Riley told us . . .

Ski instructor for the club and the visitors is Lewis (Luke) Evans. Luke is a local boy who made good stem turns! He attended the Hannes Schneider Ski School and has had a thorough training in the art . . .

Class C time trials will take place next Sunday for all who wish to enter. A telephone line has been built from the hut at the foot of the mountain to the start of the race trail on the summit. The record for the trail now stands at 2 minutes and 19 seconds for 1¼ miles . . .

CARNIVAL CHATTER

This coming week-end will mark the start of the Maine series of winter carnivals with the second annual event of the Abenaki Ski Club at Livermore Falls. Six-man teams from eight clubs will compete in races Sunday afternoon . . .

Plans for the Bridgton Winter Carnival on Feb. 1-2 are rapidly growing into shape. As a unique attraction, the largest bob sled in the world has been obtained. This sled, seventy-six feet long, holding 113 people, will run from the slope of Highland Ridge down Dodge's Hill and across the flat to Highland Lake. What a thrill!

Other events will include an inter-scholastic ski meet; N. E. Sled Dog Club Races on both days; a sanctioned open meet of the N. E. Skating Ass'n; sanctioned ski races; as well as parades, dances, balls, and Coronation of the Carnival Queen. All citizens of Bridgton are working hard on the program. Co-operation is the ski-note! . . .

Rumford's Carnival is scheduled for Feb. 8 and 9, featured by the State of Maine jumping championships . . .

The Camden event is dated for Feb. 14-16. Folks here will also use the giant bobsled hauled uphill by a tractor, and capable of making speed of 80 miles per hour on the down hill run . . .

SLALOM SOLILOQUIES

Skiing on Cannon Mountain in Franconia Notch, N. H., last Sunday, we saw some of the open slalom sponsored by the Franconia Ski Club. And what a race! . . . Primarily a cross-country star, Sel Hannah stamped himself as a rugged runner in winning this event over a field of 65 daring lads. Racing for the Franconia Ski Club, the former Dartmouth langlaufer had been out of the hospital exactly eight weeks after having his appendix removed! He finished sixth in the cross-country race on Saturday.

London Aflame . . . After Fire-Bombing—Made at the height of the gigantic fires which ravaged London when Nazi airmen unleashed a new explosive incendiary bomb upon the capital city, Dec. 29, this dramatic photo truly reveals the horror of modern war. This section of the city was entirely wiped out in the raid which the British government claims was a vicious attempt to burn the city to the ground.
